

Servant pickets on alert

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

The trenches are being dug today for a major battle between the provincial government and its unionized employees.

It isn't expected for several months, but B.C. Government Employees' Union general secretary John Fryer says the situation is serious enough to warrant advance warning for the public.

"Actually, we are trying to alert our members and the general public that we are going to be in for a tough set of negotiations," Fryer said in an interview Monday.

"Where the members are concerned, we want them to know they may be called on to walk the picket line this time. And for the public's sake, we think it's only fair to let it be known that there might be some inconvenience. It's better than waiting until the last minute and shocking everyone."

Job action wouldn't likely occur before August.

Normally, such comments might be written off as the first volley in the propaganda war that so often precedes major negotiations. But Fryer is basing his case this time on:

- The hard line that is being taken today against public sector employees everywhere;

- Solid indications that the B.C. government plans to "put its employees in their place";

- His expectation that the new "negative" bargaining approach will almost certainly be used by the government;

- The realization that the BCGEU was "within about eight hours of a strike" when settlement was reached on the last contract.

REGINA (CP)—The Saskatchewan New Democratic Party has purchased daily and weekly newspaper advertisements showing there will be a provincial election Oct. 18.

NDP Premier Allan Blakeney is expected to call the election today.

The ads, to run this week, call on the reader to vote for Blakeney Oct. 18.

They say Progressive Conservative leader Dick Collier and his party would tax the sick.

PLO, Syrians scream for blood

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Carter appealed to moderates in the Arab world Monday night to aid Egypt and Israel in the hazardous task of turning the Camp David "framework for peace" into "one of the bright moments in human history."

Carter told a nationally televised joint session of Congress

he would send Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to the Mideast today in a bid to get Jordan and Saudi Arabia to help turn "the promise of this moment" into reality.

Carter, who introduced Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to the cheering lawmakers, said he had asked other Arab leaders "to help sustain progress toward a comprehensive peace."

The two one-time enemies, sitting with first lady Rosalynn Carter in the House VIP gallery, applauded each other when Carter mentioned their names.

In the first apparent sign of serious Egyptian domestic opposition, Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel resigned in disagreement over Sadat's handling of the Camp David talks.

But the people of Israel and Egypt—divided by suspicion, fear and hostility since the birth of the Jewish state in 1948—greeted the outcome of the Camp David summit with tears, jubilation and sheer joy.

"Look, peace has come!" an emotional Jerusalem taxi driver shouted at the top of his lungs when he heard the news as he left for work along the twisting, cobblestoned streets of the holy city.

Carter also said that nations should "join in an effort to bring to an end the conflict and terrible suffering in Lebanon," but he offered no new initiatives in that direction.

"We need to consult closely with the Arab leaders, and I am pleased to say that King Hussein of Jordan and King Khalid of Saudi Arabia have now agreed to receive Secretary Vance," he said.

Carter said the secretary of state would try "to secure their support for the realization of the new hopes and dreams of the people of the Middle East."

"Today we are privileged to see the chance for one of the bright moments in human history—a chance that may open the way to peace," the president said.

He received a loud round of applause from Congress when he said the leaders of Israel and Egypt had challenged each other to speed up conclusion of a peace treaty in "a wonderful Christmas present for the world."

The president said the success of the 13-day summit exceeded his expectations, but he cautioned that the talks "left many difficult issues still to be resolved."

Carter spoke to Hussein by telephone as the monarch returned to Amman after cutting short a Mediterranean vacation. A U.S. official said Hussein declined to comment on the plan, saying he wanted time to study it.

Carter, Begin and Sadat announced the two-part framework for peace Sunday night with a televised show of hugs, smiles and laughs that obscured five major dangers:

• The first part, providing five years of limited self-rule on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, will fall apart unless Jordan and the Pales-

Aftershocks rock Iran Burial teams can't keep up with bodies

TABAS, Iran (AP)—Aftershocks rolled Monday across the parched countryside of northeastern Iran where at least 15,000 persons were believed killed in a giant quake that demolished 40 towns and villages and badly damaged 60 others.

In this oasis city, at the quake's epicentre, the dead were stretched out under the palm trees, their bodies frozen in grotesque postures of sudden death and wrapped in white sheets or colorful hand-woven cloth.

Gravediggers bit into the coarse, hard earth, scraping out shallow graves. They could not keep up with the steady procession of bodies brought by truck and car, and the dead lay in the sun as a Moslem clergyman prayed over them.

The town's minarets, mosques, and mud-brick houses crumbled under the force of the Saturday evening tremors, giving this ancient city about 640 kilometres southeast of the capital of Tehran the appearance of a flattened sand castle. Only a few buildings escaped major damage.

The quake, Iran's worst this year, killed an estimated three-quarters of Tabas' 13,000 residents. Most of the survivors were seriously injured and the most severely hurt were flown to Tehran for treatment.

Officials feared the death toll from the quake, 7.7 on the Richter scale, would go past the 15,000 mark as reports were received from remote villages surrounding Tabas, where thousands were believed buried in the rubble.

The Iranian army sent 700 soldiers, four medical teams and numerous rescue workers to help house about 1,000 survivors in tents along Tabas' dirt airport runway.

Meanwhile, new tremors were felt Monday. They lasted only a few moments, but residents feared a second major quake.

An earthquake registering 6.5 on the Richter scale rocked the same area on Aug. 31, 1968. Tabas suffered some damage and 12,000 people in the area were killed.

Davis fined $1,000, probation ordered

VANCOUVER (CP)—Former transport minister Jack Davis, 62, was fined $1,000 and placed on probation for two months Monday in county court for defrauding the provincial government of $1,074 by misrepresenting his travel expenses.

The sentence came after character witnesses appeared for the former federal Liberal cabinet minister and he announced his resignation as a member of Premier Bennett's Social Credit government.

The premier said from Kelowna that it was "difficult to accept the reality of a colleague's announced resignation under such difficult circumstances. Those of us who are in public life realize how difficult it can be and we accept that."

"However, no one can be unfeeling about the unfortunate circumstances surrounding Mr. Davis' case. As premier, I regret that it has happened and I have the greatest sympathy for both my former colleague and his family."

"Mr. Davis has given long service to this province and this country as a public servant and as a private citizen and I feel that it would be entirely appropriate for me to thank him publicly for that service at this time."

Bennett gave no indication of a by-election date.

Hurricane Greta slams Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA (AP)—Hurricane Greta swept past Honduras' north coast late Monday, its torrential rains and 200-kilometre-an-hour winds destroying hundreds of homes as it headed for landfall on the small British colony of Belize.

"We have no reports of deaths or injuries as yet, but many homes have been destroyed," said Herman Allan Padgett, the government's press secretary. Initial reports from military commanders said 481 homes had been blown down or washed away.

"It doesn't look like we're going to have anywhere near the damage caused by Fifi," Padgett said. "This hurricane appears to be of less intensity and we are better prepared."

Hurricane Fifi tore along the same path in 1974, leaving 6,000 dead and 500,000 homeless and Honduras' agricultural economy reeling.

Padgett said about 2,000 persons were evacuated from Puerto Castilla and communities were down in many areas.

Give, take for accord

The Israelis got:

- A commitment for a separate peace treaty with Egypt, no matter what else happens. Jerusalem and Cairo will have the same kind of full diplomatic relations that the United States and Canada have.
- A promise of security (in the form of peace with its neighbors) in the West Bank, Gaza strip and Sinai that no amount of troops or territory could provide.
- A U.S. promise to build them two new airfields in the Negev desert to replace the four that are being given up by Israel in the Sinai.

The Israelis gave:

- An implied commitment to withdraw from most of the territory they have occupied since 1967.
- Limitation of their military occupation of the West Bank. Their remaining troops, about half of what they now have, will be restricted to certain enclaves.
- Recognition that the legitimate rights of the Palestinians must be recognized as part of a Middle East solution.

The Egyptians got:

- The prospect of the end of Israeli military occupation and the promise of the return of almost all Egyptian territory lost during the 1967 war, including four airfields built since then by the Israelis.
- The Israelis to stop building further settlements in the Sinai and Gaza Strip, and at least a temporary halt, for the duration of the negotiations, of new settlements in the West Bank.
- American participation as a full and continuing partner in the Middle East.
- The return of sovereignty in the Sinai Peninsula.

The Egyptians gave:

- Israel the full recognition it had sought.
- The concession that its troops and the type of armaments will be limited in certain parts of Egyptian sovereign territory.
- Israel the right to veto members of the Egyptian and Jordanian delegations. An eventual Palestinian delegation will not be subject to Israeli vetoes.

Sinai towns may prove fatal flaw

By FRANK CREPEAU

TEL AVIV (AP)—The great unresolved issue of the Camp David Mideast summit is the future of about 100 Jewish settlements on occupied Arab land.

Israel is faced with a crucial decision on those settlements, a decision which could be the key to ultimate peace in the Middle East.

The settlements issue will apparently have to be overcome before there can be progress on other major and equally complicated issues, such as the political future of the West Bank and Gaza and the emotional issue of control of Jerusalem, with its Jewish, Moslem and Christian holy places.

For Israel, the settlements are a cornerstone of Zionism, clothed in the mystique of Jews putting down new roots in the Promised Land and defending the borders of the Jewish state. For Arabs, each settlement is a constant injury to Arab pride and an intolerable Jewish presence on Arab land.

The settlements, mostly small outposts of 100 families or fewer, contain about 10,000

Israelis, but the symbolic importance of the outposts is far greater than the number of settlers.

The settlements stretch from the slopes of Mount Hermon in occupied Syria in the north to sun-baked Sharm el-Sheikh on the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula. They dot the sweltering Jordan Valley in the east and spread along the Mediterranean coastline of the Sinai to the west of Israel.

Settlements started going up after Israel captured these lands in the 1967 war, and the settlement movement gained new force when Prime Minister Menachem Begin came to power in 1977, proclaiming the West Bank of the Jordan River "liberated territory."

For Begin, and many Israelis, the West Bank is the land God promised to the Jews. As prime minister, Begin has tried to work toward a peace agreement which would safeguard the existing settlements and the right of Jews to live in the West Bank.

It was on the settlement issue—specifically Jewish tinians living in the two regions agree to go along with it.

● The second section, leading to a formal peace treaty between Israel and Egypt by the end of the year, will collapse unless the Israeli parliament agrees within two weeks to abandon all Jewish settlements in the Sinai Desert. Begin said in a television interview Monday that he would not push for their removal.

The blueprint for peace won't warm support from members of Congress, but a spokesman for UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim cautioned that "many difficult issues remain to be resolved."

And the Soviet Union, relegated to a spectator's role during the summit, accused Egypt of betraying Arab interests and demanding to Israeli-American demands.

The territorial problems arise from the 1967 Middle East War, when Israel captured the West Bank from Jordan, the Golan Heights from Syria and the Sinai and Gaza Strip from Egypt in six days of lightning warfare.

The section of the agreement concerning the West Bank and Gaza Strip—called A Framework for Peace in the Middle East—has six major provisions:

● A five-year transition period of limited self-rule for the Palestinian inhabitants of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

● Withdrawal of Israeli troops stationed in the two territories to a limited number of specific garrisons.

● Negotiations involving Israel, Egypt, Jordan and elected Palestinians from the two territories to determine the final status of the West Bank and Gaza.

● No new Israeli settlements in the West Bank and Gaza during the negotiations.

● Intensive security arrangements that may involve UN forces, demilitarized zones and early-warning stations. There would be no American troops.

● An exchange of letters by the United States, Israel and Egypt on the status of East Jerusalem, the former Jordanian section of the holy city.

The section of the accord concerning Sinai—called A Framework for the Conclusion of a Peace Treaty between Egypt and Israel—has five key provisions:

● A formal Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty to be signed within three months.

● A phased Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai, with the last troops leaving the desert within three years.

● The handover of Israeli airfields in the Sinai to Egyptian civilian control. The United States to build Israel two new airfields in the Negev Desert.

● The establishment of an assortment of security zones in the Sinai.

● Normal relations between Israel and Egypt to be established at the completion of the first major troop withdrawal from Sinai—scheduled for three to nine months after the signing of the peace treaty.

Arab militants condemned the three-way agreement, with angry Libyans calling for the assassination of Sadat and the PLO vowing to fight on against the Jewish state.

The official Libyan radio said thousands of persons demonstrated in Tripoli, chanting "Sadat is a criminal, kill him!" The radio described the framework for peace as "agreements of humiliation, shame and treason."

PLO chief Yasser Arafat conferred with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi in Tripoli and then returned to Beirut for what a spokesman called an "urgent meeting" of the guerrilla group's leadership on "the dangerous results" of Camp David.

Syria's official Damascus radio said Sadat entered into a "unilateral peace treaty" with Israel and called the accord on the former Jordanian West Bank a "violation of the rights of the Palestinian Arab people."

In Beirut, a PLO spokesman said the group would carry on its "armed resistance inside the occupied territories, and Sadat doesn't speak for the Palestinians."

"The Middle East will remain tense and a flashpoint, and this agreement will not contribute to any just settlement in the Middle East," he said.

Arab leaders opposed to Sadat, including the heads of Syria, Libya, Iraq, Algeria, South Yemen and the PLO, met in Damascus on Wednesday for a summit of their own to counter the results of Camp David.

But the official news media of such moderate Arab states as Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and North Yemen relayed the Camp David story without editorial comment.

Political observers in Jerusalem said Begin faced a tough fight over the accords in the 120-seat Knesset, which is scheduled to meet Sept. 25 to begin debating the twin accords.

"Everything the Knesset decides will be carried out," Begin said. "We are in the hands of the Knesset. We must accept the verdict of the Knesset as it is. This is the very soul of democracy."

Opponents of the agreement, including Moshe Arens, a member of Begin's party and chairman of the powerful foreign affairs and defence committee, were reported to be gearing up for the Knesset debate.

Egyptians, wearied of war and economic austerity, generally appeared to welcome news of the Camp David accords—even if it meant isolation in the Arab world.

"What have the Arabs done for us, anyway?" said Mohammed Abdel Moneim, a cab driver. "They all want to fight until the last Egyptian soldier dies."

But diplomatic sources expressed fears that the peace blueprint might deal a death blow to Arab solidarity, dividing the Arab states into hostile pro-American and pro-Soviet camps.

The leadership of Sadat's National Democratic Party met in an emergency session to examine the Camp David accords. Sadat is to convene the National Security Council—Egypt's highest policy-making body—when he returns.

Settlers caught in middle

settlements in the Sinai Peninsula—that U.S. President Carter noted "agreement has not been reached." Egyptian President Anwar Sadat wanted the Sinai settlements disbanded and Begin could not agree.

Begin announced the issue would come before the Israeli parliament for "a free vote" and he would accept its decision.

That means one result of the Camp David summit has been to set up a national debate in Israel on the emotionally laden question.

In January, Begin declared, "Israelis do not burn settlements. They build settlements and keep them." And he said no Israeli government could dismantle a settlement "and stay in office even one day."

But Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan has told settlers in the Sinai the people of Israel would not support them if the settlements blocked a peace agreement.

And there are many Israelis, such as adherents of the Peace Now movement, who would be willing to give up settlements if that would ensure peace.

Yet the historical fact remains: Israel has never voluntarily abandoned a settlement.

Have those basic attitudes been changed by the talks at Camp David, and is Israel now willing to pay the price of abandoning settlements to achieve peace?

The debate began almost as soon as Washington announced a framework for peace had been agreed upon.

Parliament member Geula Cohen, a member of Begin's Likud bloc and a fiery supporter of settlements, immediately called for a vote of no confidence in Begin. Israel Television quoted her as saying, "This is not a peace treaty but a treaty for war."

Zvi Shloah, a leader of the Movement for a Greater Israel, said Camp David resulted in "an agreement of treason," and Israel Radio quoted him as saying Begin's election was "a black day for Israel."

Yehuda Ben-Meir, a powerful member of the National Religious Party in Begin's coalition government, said compromise on the settlement issue would be "a terrible blow."

Said a worried settler at Yamit, in Israeli-occupied Sinai, "I hope we won't have to be the great sacrifice."

But Defence Minister Ezer Weizman, one of the Camp

David negotiators, said when asked in a U.S. television interview about how Parliament would vote on the issue, "I think when Israel hears (about the Camp David agreements) it will vote for the possibility of peace."

The immediate Israeli decision will be on the settlements in Egyptian Sinai, about two dozen outposts clustered along the Mediterranean coast in northern Sinai and three settlements in the south along the Gulf of Aqaba and at Sharm el-Sheikh.

Those are the settlements that directly concern Egypt, and there will have to be agreement on them to get an Israel-Egyptian peace pact.

A broader peace agreement, perhaps encompassing Jordan, would have to deal with another group of settlements—almost 50 outposts in the West Bank of the Jordan River.

BCGEU digs trenches

Last time the union threatened to shut down all the government-operated liquor stores, something that would have created a considerable public inconvenience without likely falling prey to government action under essential services legislation. This time it also has a few tricks up its sleeve.

Fryer says there are other "key" groups of employees that have a low public profile, but which could be extremely effective in a work stoppage.

Under questioning, he made reference to the employees who handle the paper-work in the medical services plan.

"For instance, not a single doctor would get paid while these people were out," he said.

Fryer says tips on what stand the B.C. government intends to take are coming, oddly enough, from other parts of the country.

"Our agreements become the goals of provincial employees elsewhere. Interestingly enough, they are now being told by their governments not to bank their hopes on the B.C. rates, that the B.C. government is going to put its employees in their place this time."

Another important consideration, he says, is the fact the BCGEU agreement would be considered a trend setter for unions dealing with such crown corporations as B.C. Hydro.

The question of wages may have nothing to do with any fight that shapes up. The union lists as key issues contracting out of work, occupational health safety, continued medical and dental coverage for retired members, paid legal aid, paid educational leave, and a scaling down of working hours without a loss in pay for employees approaching retirement age.

Schroeder, Speaker of the legislature, on Friday. The fine and probation means Davis will have a criminal record.

Six witnesses, including three senators, a mayor, a former Liberal MP and a former chairman of British Columbia Hydro were called to speak on Davis' behalf.

The character witnesses included Senators Ray Perrault, Ed Lawson, and George Van Roggen, former B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum, former Liberal MP Doug Hogarth, and West Vancouver Mayor Peter Jones.

Perrault testified that he often traveled by air with him when Davis was in the federal cabinet.

"He was always deeply immersed in work and was obviously carrying out his duties as a minister of the crown," Perrault said, in a reference to the minister's airline work habits. "He had a first-rate reputation among ministers of the crown."

Perrault said Davis, during his service as a federal cabinet minister, often returned unexpended portions of his department's expenses.

Van Roggen, a lawyer, said he often traveled by air with Davis and noted that he always spent the entire flight time working on cabinet business.

In Victoria, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said he regrets "the whole tragic set of circumstances of Mr. Davis leaving politics."

During Davis' trial, court was told that he obtained refunds after changing first-class air tickets, paid for by the government, to economy. The refunds, ranging up to $204 a ticket, were sent directly to Davis at his request. Davis was found not guilty of theft. He has also said he will appeal the fraud conviction.

Holocaust, Bunkers sweep Emmys

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Holocaust, NBC's saga of two German families caught in the Nazi terror, and All in the Family, a comedy series about the favorite bigot in the United States, won top honors at the 30th Emmy awards Sunday night.

The 9½-hour Holocaust was selected as outstanding limited series and won Emmys for stars Michael Moriarty, the sadistic Nazi major, and Meryl Streep, the Christian daughter-in-law of the doomed Weiss family.

The total awards for Holocaust came to seven, including two creative arts awards presented at a separate ceremony last week.

For the fifth time, the saga of All in the Family, the eight-year old CBS comedy series about Archie Bunker and family, was named outstanding comedy series by the academy. Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton were hailed outstanding lead performers in a comedy series for a third time.

The only winner to break the All in the Family comedy sweep was Julie Kavner, Brenda Morganstern of Rhoda, who was selected best supporting actress in a comedy series.

The Rockford Files, with James Garner as an ex-con turned private eye, was named outstanding drama series. Emmys for outstanding leads in a drama series were awarded to Sada Thompson of Family and Edward Asner of Lou Grant. It was Asner's sixth Emmy.

Nicaragua army closes on rebels

MANAGUA (AP) — Government forces were airlifted into positions around Esteli in northern Nicaragua on Monday to attack the last guerrilla strongholds there.

Esteli has been in rebel hands since Sept. 9 although the national guard said Saturday it had overpowered sniper positions in the town of 30,000.

Earlier, the guard, Nicaragua's 7,500-member army, recaptured the towns of Masaya, Leon, Chinandega and Penas Blancas, routing rebels who are led by guerrillas intent on overthrowing the authoritarian government of President Anastasio Somoza.

Travellers from the Esteli area, including some who had flown over the town, said it looked dead. They reported no movement of civilians or automobiles. A fire burned near the centre of town.

Troops were lifted to a field north of Esteli to attack from the north and west, the travellers said. Rebels held the high ground leading into the city from the south. National guard forces manned a checkpoint on the Pan American Highway about five kilometres south of the town and barred journalists from entering.

Mopping-up action was reported from Chinandega, which the guard wrested from the rebels Sunday. There was scattered shooting overnight in Managua where businessmen vowed to continue a general strike they called Aug. 25 to pressure Somoza to resign.

Correspondents in southern Nicaragua reported occasional firing near the outpost of Penas Blancas on the Costa Rican border. Guerrillas fought a nine-hour battle with the national guard garrison there Sunday before withdrawing into Costa Rica. The guerrillas, led by the Sandinista National Liberation Front, vowed to try anew to take Penas Blancas, establish a provisional government and invite international recognition.

An investigative team from the Organization of American States was in Costa Rica to examine Costa Rican claims that Nicaraguan forces crossed the border last week and fired on Costa Rican civilians.

Tickets for Tut draw big in Apple

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thousands of people queued up Monday for a chance to see King Tut's treasures.

The line stretched out for 13 blocks on Fifth Avenue. Tickets went on sale for the Metropolitan Museum of Art's Treasures of Tutankhamun exhibit, which opens on Dec. 20.

An estimated 7,000 people, ignoring damp and rainy weather, stretched from the museum's entrance before officials finally closed the line to newcomers.

"It was amazing," said a spokesman for the museum. "I got here at 6 o'clock and the regular Fifth Avenue buses were just jammed with people. But when the buses stopped, just about everyone got off and joined the line."

Then the morning joggers started showing up, and the dog walkers. It was really quite some scene.

The exhibit is to run through April 15. After that, it goes to San Francisco.

Smith stance challenged

SALISBURY (AP) — A member of Rhodesia's ruling bi-racial council said Monday the government may be forced eventually to negotiate face-to-face with black nationalist guerrilla leaders, although that was ruled out last week by Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Chief Jeremiah Chirau, the only member of the ruling council who favors proposed Western-sponsored negotiations with leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, said he believes that "despite what has happened, all-party talks would be the only alternative" to more fighting in the six-year-old guerrilla war.

His comments qualified last week's policy statement that Rhodesia has no choice but to try to drum up support for the internal agreement in March that created the interim government and envisioned black majority rule by the end of this year. Patriotic Front guerrilla leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo did not take part in those talks.

Chirau said he agrees with the decision of the other three council members to shelve proposed all-party talks because such a conference is not feasible in the immediate future.

Officials have said universal suffrage elections to bring about black rule will not be possible as long as the guerrilla war continues at its current high level.

In other developments:

● Record war casualties since the beginning of the month continued to soar Monday when the military announced 35 more deaths in the previous 24-hour period, including eight members of the army and rural guard forces. About 500 persons have been killed since Sept. 1, including about 200 civilians the military said were slain by guerrillas and 100 guerrilla recruits, collaborators and crossfire victims.

● Leaders of the transition government have formally accepted an invitation to visit the United States, officials said, and visa applications are being made.

Mexican air strike strands travellers

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican airline pilots defied a government plea to return to work Monday and continued supporting an air controllers' walkout that stranded tens of thousands of tourists throughout Mexico.

Most foreign airlines resumed flights in and out of the country Monday morning. About 1,000 pilots for Mexican airlines refused to fly after 900 controllers left their jobs Sunday protesting government demands that they become government employees and sign individual contracts.

The pilots said they doubted the competence of substitute air controllers, including air force personnel and other airport workers pressed into service by the government.

Settle or we'll shut down, London Times tells unions

LONDON (Reuters) — The Times will cease publication Nov. 30 unless agreement with trades unions on a range of issues is reached by then, the newspaper company said Monday.

This year, 9.6 million copies of The Times and sister papers have been lost through a series of unofficial strikes resulting in a loss of $5.2 million in profits.

The other papers are The Sunday Times and The Times literary, educational and higher educational supplements.

Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all—results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money returned.

The difficult road which lies ahead

SUNDAY'S DRAMATIC CONCLUSION of the Camp David meeting between the leaders of the United States, Egypt and Israel has raised hopes throughout the world that peace is yet possible in the Middle East.

However, much remains to be done before such expectations are realised.

To those who witnessed the ceremonial signing of the two agreements providing for negotiations of a full Middle East peace treaty within three months, the impression was strong that if matters were left in the hands of the three principals — President Carter, Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat — the prospect of a permanent Arab-Israeli settlement was a certainty.

But, sadly — and inevitably — the euphoria of Sunday has been followed by the reality of Monday. Prime Minister Begin returns to a government and a country divided in opinion on the items covered by the initial accord, particularly on the matter of Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory.

To many Israelis, including some in his own party, Mr. Begin has bargained away the Jewish nation's strength, and, in effect, done nothing but sign a document heralding its abject surrender.

The Israeli prime minister, who perhaps knows better than most of his detractors the terrible toll a continuation of war will take, faces a difficult task before the Knesset which meets to debate the peace terms in little more than a fortnight.

At that time, he says the people of Israel must decide whether peace is more important than Jewish settlements on occupied Arab lands. Whatever their decision is, he will abide by it.

President Sadat faces no less a task on his return to Cairo. Already he is being vilified in Syria and Libya, along with opposition being sounded in Egypt. The Palestine Liberation Organization has, not unexpectedly, rejected the accord out of hand, and warns that it will step up its terrorist activities in Israel and the occupied Arab territories if negotiations continue.

Despite all this, the success of the Camp David meeting in producing a workable blueprint for peace in the Middle East cannot be denied. That that much was accomplished is a tribute to the determination and persistence of President Carter as well as the courage and patience of the Israeli and Egyptian leaders.

But it must also be recognized that it was only a blueprint for peace and nothing more than that. It was in its simplest terms an expression of faith on the part of its signatories that it is possible to travel the road to peace. It is doubtful that any of them believed for one moment that it would be an easy trip.

Distant dreams

MAKING PREDICTIONS is easy and even fun, provided we go about it the right way. The trick is to do one's predicting far enough in the future. Then people will usually have forgotten if time proves you wrong — and you can take pains to remind them if time proves you right.

Employment Minister Bud Cullen indulged in a little predicting recently. He said that Canada's present shortage of jobs will change to a shortage of labor in about three years.

"Every economist that I've read and that I've listened to has indicated that there will be a shortage of labor by 1981," he said.

Interesting — but only briefly. There are 941,000 people looking for work in Canada right now and most of them would sooner not wait until 1981.

Mr. Cullen is employment minister, not future employment minister. So enough of such dreams, however pleasant and hopeful. We can all dream, without the help of politicians.

Trudeau: actor without peer in politics

Richard Jackson

OTTAWA — Detest or defy him — few can ignore him such is his compulsion — when Prime Minister Trudeau leaves the national stage Canadians will lose the most talented actor of living political memory.

Impulsive, he could leave on a whim.

Sensitive, he could anticipate an invitation by the Liberal Party to go.

Stubborn, aware of the odds of triumph and disaster, he could tough it out and let the votes go where they may.

Any of these scenarios is possible.

He said from the beginning he wouldn't outstay his welcome and in any event would leave when he felt he had enough. That's the first eventually.

As to leaving before he actually is pushed out the party door, the Liberals have been very skilful with their disappearing act for unwanted leaders. Always done with style, this vanishing trick, and never with pity.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King was "persuaded" to leave and died of a broken heart, in the loneliness of his Gatineau cottage a year later.

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent was all but shamed out of his leadership as a loser and left, broken in spirit.

Prime Minister Lester Pearson was even pressured out, just one week before he would have celebrated his 71st birthday and fifth anniversary in office.

Liberals love winners, can't abide losers.

While there is talk that Trudeau could go voluntarily or be "pushed," he is a leader like no other the Liberals ever have had, and being his own man as no other prime minister before him, just as likely could ignore the party pressures.

He is at once their heaviest handicap and richest asset.

He dominates the emotions and imaginations of Canadians with his flair for the outrageous. He can stand up his Queen and do handstands with his sons. He can be charming and obscene. But he can never be boring.

And that's what makes him different — if no better nor worse in performance than most other leaders — because he is never the same.

Only the fresh flower in his lapel, plucked in winter from the Governor General's greenhouses across the drive from his home at 24 Sussex, and in summer from his own gardens atop the escarpment of the Ottawa River, is unchanging.

An actor without a peer in politics, he creates his own changing roles with the masks and costumes.

There was the first-term Trudeau of the giddy post-Expo years, leather-coated, sandalled, tieless and trendy, flashing along in his low-slung silver Mercedes.

Now, a decade later, in more subdued times, he is immaculate in trimly-tailored conservative blue, grey or brown pin-stripes, on formal or public occasions.

When he gives you an infrequent peek behind the official prime ministerial facade, you see him in a domestic setting as the casually slacked and sweated single father.

Up front of the press, at his infrequent conferences where he is so "in charge" of the proceedings, he teases and toys with the captivated — and captive — reporters. He is the macho bachelor of old, the graceful one-and-a-half backward-gainer off the diving board, the far-younger-than-his-years athlete, the boy friend again of Barbra Streisand and other talented beauties, the thumbs cupped into his belt, palms pointed downward man's man.

Maybe the thing that gives him all this pizzazz is the knowledge that polls show less support of Quebec separation than 10 years ago — and that, he always has said, is the name of his game.

"Walkout be damned — I'm going to go on a sit-down strike instead."

Why the next SALT treaty will be stalled for years

WASHINGTON — However much the outcome of the Camp David meeting may add to President Carter's reputation as peacemaker, still another test promises to weigh more heavily in the balance. That is the long-stalled SALT II treaty which has Soviet and U.S. diplomats skittering back and forth between Moscow, Geneva, New York and Washington.

From an informed source, one who follows these matters closely from day to day, comes a report of yet another stall. Or, rather, a series of stalls that will checkmate a treaty, with all the fierce controversy it is bound to arouse, from embarrassing the president as he prepares at a low point in the polls for re-election.

As one of the top White House officials puts it: everything we're doing has just one aim and that is re-election. Opinions canvassed over the past year against this criterion show that a no-treaty result would not damage the president and might even help him, showing him as the strong man determined not to yield to Soviet blandishments.

On the other hand, a treaty rejected by the Senate — a probability today — would be most damaging. Around a defeat, even a narrow defeat, all the passions stirred by the last-ditch opponents, by the Pentagon and by those championing the Soviet dissidents would boil. Carter would be in the middle of a no-win contest.

So, as this report goes, there will be no treaty signed in 1978. In 1979 the New Hampshire primaries will be scarcely more than a year away, and with Ronald Reagan pounding on the defenceless America theme it will hardly meet the re-election test for Carter to embrace Leonid Brezhnev at a treaty-signing ceremony.

Therefore, there will be no treaty next year, and certainly not in 1980. While this sounds wild, it matches the stern realities Carter faces.

There is only one question: will the Soviets play this game of stall? The answer of the observers who see it this way is "yes."

The Soviets have nothing to lose, and positioning any decision on the cruise missile and its range will cause neither side any pain. The repeated expressions of concern about Brezhnev's precarious health and his role as an apostle of SALT is belittled by these observers. They cite the way the narrow controls within the Politburo consolidate quickly when a public leader has gone.

One indirect benefit is to rob such anti-SALT doubters and crusaders as Sen. Henry M. Jackson and Paul Nitze, former deputy secretary of defence, of an issue. For unlike Nitze — a brilliant thinker, devoting most of his time to harpooning any further agreement with the Soviets that would have a chance of acceptance on either side of the divide — it is not so much an issue in the customary political use of that word, but a way of life.

Without an agreement covering limits on offensive nuclear weapons, the buildup of the nuclear arsenals on both sides will continue. What is more important, the quality of these arsenals, the ever-more-lethal and devastating capacity of the weapons in these great mountains of death, will multiply.

Even those most dedicated to the need for a standoff agreement are beginning to have doubts. They are wondering if a point of no return has not been reached. They express something like despair over the nuclear abyss into which the world seems to be sinking.

There are those who will be deeply disappointed if Carter fails to come up with any form of limiting agreement. But so far as voter strength goes — that fundamental goal of re-election — they are not a major factor. While they might stay home on Election Day, it is hard to imagine them voting for a conservative Republican opposed to any and all traffic with the Soviet Union.

I readily concede that this may be far too pessimistic. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has consistently held to the belief that a treaty will be signed, with SALT II putting an effective brake on nuclear weapons development.

Paul Warnke, chief negotiator and head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, has put months of effort into talking out the details of an agreement. He has done this knowing full well that the anti-SALT crusaders have made him a principal target.

So the prophets of despair may be suffering merely an end of summer gloom. The meetings between East and West still go on, and reports of the comings and goings of the negotiators have an optimistic note indicating that final details are being worked out. But for Carter, a treaty requiring a two-thirds vote for ratification by the Senate is a very high hurdle indeed.

Libya's oil is bankrolling experiments in socialism

By IAN MATHER
The London Observer

TRIPOLI, Libya — Foreign observers are watching with interest and with a certain amount of apprehension to see whether Libya's maverick ruler, Colonel Muammar Qadhafi has set in motion a cultural revolution Chinese-style.

In a fiery speech to mark the ninth anniversary of the overthrow of the monarch Qadhafi this month urged Libyan workers, "starting from today" to take over factories and run them on revolutionary lines.

The Libyan press has since listed 175 diverse types of establishments as having been taken over by popular revolutionary committees. They range from important already-nationalized concerns, such as steel, tobacco, cement, aluminium, and electric, to various hotels and the Omar Khayyam Macaroni Company of Benghazi.

The principal question is whether the take-overs are merely an emotional flush of enthusiasm in reaction to Qadhafi's speech or whether they represent the beginning of a new significant stage in Libya's socialist revolution.

However, Western diplomats had already begun to notice new trends dating from the appearance last February of the second volume of the Little Green Book written by Qadhafi. The two green books, identical in size to the saying of Chairman Mao, contain the evolving personal political philosophy of Qadhafi.

Volume two, dealing with economics, states that workers should take over "supreme authority" and that there should be a major redistribution of wealth since no one need own more than one house and one car.

The main slogan in the Green Book is "Partners not Wage Slaves" and in the last few days this slogan has appeared all over Tripoli. On the pedestal of an original Roman bronze statue at the entrance to Tripoli's cashan another slogan ways: "Islamic law and socialism together will triumph everywhere."

Since the publication of the Green Book's second part in February foreign observers have noticed a growing number of Libyan managers losing their jobs to workers' committees. In some industries, particularly the tobacco industry, this is already causing chaos with the result that for the first time Libya has had to become a major importer of cigarettes.

However, in a number of industries there is evidence that the existing managers are continuing in their jobs. The Tripoli official newspaper New Dawn said recently that a workers' committee had taken over the principal ammonia plant in the capital. The committee elected eight "popular directors" but they decided that the existing management should continue.

The Libyan manager of a major automobile spare parts company in Tripoli told me that in his establishment a workers' committee had been formed and announced that a new manager would be elected. Ten workers had put their names forward. He had added his name to the list and been elected to the job by a popular majority.

Foreign-owned companies are particularly anxious about the new developments. There is already considerable tension between the Libyan government and the international oil companies.

Qadhafi is considered fortunate in that he can continue his experimental socialism against a background of huge oil revenues, which have enabled him to claim recently that Libya now has the highest per capita income in the world.

But there are signs that rising prices are producing tensions among the population. Even the strictly-controlled press has begun to carry articles about rising prices.

Despite vast spending on sophisticated armaments, making the Libyan armed forces among the best equipped in Africa, much of the oil revenue is being spent on new housing, education, hospitals, and on agricultural land reclamation, so that the average standard of living is rising gradually.

Sir Arthur was fooled

By ROBERT C. COWEN
Christian Science Monitor

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes, could have used more of the skepticism he ascribed to the great detective.

He was utterly taken in by the case of the "Cottlevy fairies" in which two girls appeared in photos along with a group of tiny winged people. Computer enhanced image analysis now shows the photos unambiguously to have been faked.

The photos created a sensation in their day and for 70 years have intrigued those who are interested in the paranormal. You don't have to believe in fairies to wonder at the gullibility of someone as worldly-wise as Sir Arthur.

The photos take their name from the village where the two girls lived. They certainly do show sharply defined images of "little people" together with images of the girls. There reportedly is nothing obvious about the prints to suggest double exposure or superimposed negatives.

However, when Robert Sheaffer and William Spaulding, acting for the committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal (CSICIP), ran the photos through computer enhancement analysis, they found clear traces of the string used to support the "fairies."

James Randi of CSICIP, a magician who has made a crusade of exposing "paranormal" fakery, also points out that photographic emulsions available 70 years ago weren't fast enough to capture the image at a shutter speed of 1/50 of a second which was claimed to have been used. And, according to a report in New Scientist, the studies suggest that more than one camera was involved, despite claims to the contrary.

This would be merely an amusing footnote to history were it not for the fact that Doyle-like gullibility runs riot today.

Astrology has made a vigorous comeback in spite of being a thinly-veiled system of belief in magic with no basis in physical or biological science.

Many people, including community and intellectual leaders, order their lives in accordance with biorhythm charts which trace the high and low points ("critical days") of purported physical, emotional, and intellectual "cycles." Yet these cycles have a dubious scientific basis.

For example, Michael A. Persinger, Walter J. Cooke, and Jean T. James of Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ont., looked for such cycles in mining accident statistics and couldn't find them. These scientists dismiss biorhythm theory.

Of course, scientists never can prove absolutely that fairies don't exist, that we are not being visited by flying saucers from outer space or that no supernatural forces are at work on our planet. No one can demonstrate a negative.

But that is not the point. Those who want to believe in such things will do so. What is disturbing is the fact that today many people of discernment and achievement let their mental guard down, as did Sir Arthur, and swallow all kinds of improbably claims on flimsy evidence.

Perhaps, along with the astrology, biorhythm, and reincarnation courses now being taught at some universities, students should be exposed to a good dose of Sherlock Holmes too.

Women still misunderstood

Re: W. R. MacLean's Sept. 6 letter entitled Cold Porridge. Doesn't he think it possible that if women through the ages who had wanted to and were equipped for it had had as much time, therefore energy, also encouragement and freedom to devote to the creation of literature, art, music and inventions, something could have come of it?

Women cannot deal wholly with repetitive bread and butter issues, plus bring full attention, necessary beginning and ongoing experience, plus relaxed minds and bodies to creativity in other than the few, until now, accepted ways.

I wonder how much the nature of the domineering woman (and here I think of my own mother) is brought about by her own frustrations — a subconscious reaction?

Mr. MacLean's reaction to domineering women can equally well be applied to men as I see it. Men have so far had the legal right to be up front about their wants and to be considered other than men (a difficult position) if they do not stand up for them.

They also can be subtle in pursuing their ends. This can take the form of ignoring matters of no importance (to them) because they do not wish to acknowledge their existence, consciously or subconsciously.

If women go "overboard" and become other than the "pedestal" type, how much of that is necessary before some measure of balance is achieved between men and women? Mr. MacLean's letter shows how far women still have to go to be understood.

Ottawa dilemma

Suppose (just suppose) you have an income of thirty-five thousand dollars a year. Then suppose you plan to spend fifty thousand a year. Obviously, you will have to find the other fifteen thousand from somewhere.

You might have it in the bank. You might mortgage the house. Or you might borrow it. And if you did one of those things you would be able to pay the bills. If on the other hand you had been living that way for the past 10 years the options would be running out, and you would have to face the music.

Now just multiply that by one million and you have the dilemma that now faces the Liberal government in Ottawa. There is no more cash in the bank. The country is mortgaged as never before. And they are borrowing in one year more than the total gold and foreign currency reserves in a futile effort to shore up the dollar, when it should have been allowed to find its realistic level.

And now we have the pitiful spectacle of promises to cut future spending by two to three billion — a sort of death bed repentance of no real import; while the minister of finance dangles the idiotic carrot of a "possible cut in taxes" which he knows could only be done at the expense of increasing the deficit!

Until Ottawa, and some of the provinces too, get their spending below their income, all talk of petty savings and tax cuts is sheer eyewash. Once we have the courage to face up to that necessity, and not till then, we can begin to dig ourselves out of the hole we are in.

Isn't it about time Canadians woke up?

Battle just begun at VGH

During the recent crisis at Vancouver General Hospital, Health Minister Robert McClelland was reported to have said that hospital societies and administrators should concern themselves with patient care and not become entangled in philosophical battles (my paraphrase).

Although the VGH crisis centered around some rather serious nursing problems, this particular statement was presumably in response to a number of people in the Vancouver area who have become members of the VGH society in an attempt to alter legally that hospital's current open-door attitude toward abortion. Of course they are opposed by others whose aim it is to remove all restrictions to abortion, hence the philosophical battlelines.

Surely, however, the health minister does not imagine this conflict will disappear simply by cancelling an annual meeting or by washing his hands, Pontius Pilate-like, of the whole business, lest his attention be drawn away from worthier patients.

This particular issue is very much at the heart of civilized medicine and the responsibility for seeing it resolved justly lies most of all with our elected representatives and secondarily with hospital administrators and medical staff.

The battle has only begun.

Bawlf's remarks astonishing

Sierra Club defends inquiry

In reference to your article of Sept. 1 Bawlf denies push to log valley, among the many things that astonish me about Mr. Bawlf in the article is the statement which you attribute to him, namely: "... I commissioned a judicial inquiry ... due to allegations they (the Sierra Club) had made. The result of the inquiry, by provincial court Judge J. L. McCarthy, was a repudiation of those allegations, at a great deal of expense of time and taxpayer's money."

The Sierra Club's "allegations", which the minister refers to, were that the Guide Outfitters Licence and Certificate granted to Howard Paish were not issued in accordance with the guiding regulations of the wildlife act. This fact, together with the refusal of the fish and wildlife branch to discuss the validity of Mr. Paish's certificate, led the club to conclude that the branch's policies were influenced by a "dubious relationship" with Mr. Paish.

Judge J. L. McCarthy states unequivocally in his report: "I find that Paish's guide outfitter's licence was invalid ... Paish's guide outfitter's licence, the linch-pin of the certificate, is invalid. Accordingly, the foundation upon which the validity of the certificate rests has been, if you will, swept away. No certificate can properly be issued to a person who does not hold a valid guide outfitter's licence and likewise no certificate can be transferred to such person."

Judge McCarthy also states that the fish and wildlife branch "gave legitimate reason for the public to question its motives." How can these statements be con-

To be considered for publication in entirety or in part, letters to the editor should be on subjects of general interest, brief and to the point and, preferably, typed. Pen-names will be used, if requested, but all letters must be signed by the writer, whose address also must be included.

Crofton dream

I have lived in the same house in Crofton for 32 years. I am 83 years of age, coming here from Manitoba. Writing and poetry comes very easy to me.

APOLOGIES TO GALWAY BAY

Have you ever seen a spot like Crofton? Well maybe at the closing of your day You can sit and sip the suds at Vicky's And watch the pretty nylons on display.

You can see the smoke rise from our pulp mill. The longshoremen busy making 'hay.' Hysters busy at the ship side Loading lumber for far and wide.

There are cynics who say the mill smells awful And this could easily be. But a kind and gentle east wind Wafts it all right out to sea.

Some say Crofton has no water What we have could make this true. But a diviner thinks much different And our hopes revive anew.

Developers want to come amongst us To make Crofton what it ought to be With the assurance of water Our future is made, or so I see.

Have you ever seen a spot like heaven? With Vesuvius right across the sea. Even the rainbow sees the location And rests between there and me.

So if you are stuck for a location As many would seem to be, Just give us a look at Crofton A dream town by the sea.

First Heidi, a child next?

This is an open letter to a jerk. That's the only word I can find to describe this person.

You came down Happy Valley Road like a maniac and hit my little dog Heidi. She was such a tiny little thing — you didn't give her a chance. And to make matters worse you didn't even stop. You left her there in great agony and pain. My next door neighbor and another lady came to her rescue and put her out of her misery with a bullet. I thank them for sparing her any further pain.

When I came home from work that day my dogs came to meet me as they have other days, but no Heidi — I knew something was wrong when I called and she didn't come, then my neighbor told me the sad news. Of course I cried, I still do for I loved that little dog, she gave a lot of joy. I just hope you lose something you love. I never thought I would harbor such thoughts, but at this moment I sure do.

My point of this letter is that it could have been a child crossing the street as there are a lot of children in the 4300 block of Happy Valley Road. If I was a mother of a young child here I would be up in arms over the way the speeders go up and down Happy Valley Road and I think it's about time the police started doing something about it because next time it just might be a child or a teenager or another animal.

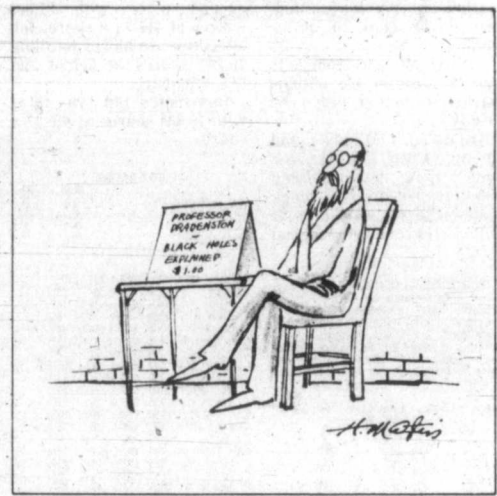

To me you are a jerk and a sadist and I hope you get yours someday. You must know you hit this little creature. I feel a little better now that my feelings are down on paper for everyone to know. Thank you for the space in your newspaper.

Clear-cut logging policy wasteful

Public insulted in forest role

I am thankful to J. D. Curtis of Comox for giving me an opportunity, in replying to his criticism of Sept. 7, to elaborate on the harmful abuse of clear-cut logging in British Columbia.

For Mr. Curtis' information I am a forester who spent 18 years in the forest service and six with industry, and my relatives in France have large forest holdings that I visit fairly often.

On the other hand, I doubt that Mr. Curtis has any formal forestry training, because, he would not imply that coniferous forests are best managed by clear-cutting, or make other generalized statements that have little silvicultural or economic forest validity.

But, although technically wrong in his understanding of silvicultural forestry, I am sure that Mr. Curtis represents a majority of British Columbians concerned with the evolution of our forestry practices in this province.

His belief that the forest service is 30 years behind the times, can most likely be attributed to the complete inadequacy of that department's public relations and extension forestry. It is infantile and nearly insulting in its assumption that the public has no role and no contribution to make except "prevent forest fires."

My letters, of the past eight months, are written in a feeble attempt to share my broader than average forestry experience and my fairly thorough knowledge of B.C. with anyone concerned about our forestry future. I am attacking our policy of clear-cut logging of vast areas and steep sidehills simply because it is a silvicultural absurdity, "duplicated nowhere else in the world, and only justified for dubious economic reasons. It is not an 'abhorrence' Mr. Curtis, it is technically unjustified and wasteful.

Because of limited space may I just try to explain it this way: In the rangelands of B.C. and elsewhere in the world, cattlemen know that if they can burn off the brush and forest cover they can increase their range area and promote fresh green grass. They argue that in economic terms beef is more valuable than trees or the harm created to wildlife, the environment and increased erosion. Good range management does recognize the use of fire in specific times and places, but indiscriminate burning is outlawed.

In the same way, clear-cut logging as practised in B.C. is defensible only on economic grounds. It has its place in certain forest type, on certain slopes, and for certain economic reasons. But it is not justified where the harm and the waste (of young growth) exceeds the economic interests of the people of this province and threatens their environment and several important tributary resources.

The interests of logging companies cannot continue to be the sole economic gauge for our present forest management policy.

Key world elite

I refer to the Colonist Comment column in which you analyse and condemn a statement made by David Barrett. You condemn the adjectives he used, i.e. white, Anglo Saxon, Protestant, but totally ignore the noun they were qualifying. Thus you failed to take into account the whole meaning, in fact the very gist of the sentence, the key word of which was ELITE.

Most of the elite in our society, Mr. Barrett feels, are WASP, but it is the elite of whom he is speaking here, not the WASPs as such.

This kind of criticism is like taking the statement "Damp green crocodiles are dangerous" and then criticising it as being hate-mongering and discriminatory against "damp green crocodiles" or "damp green crocodiles!"

The subject of this sentence is what gives it its meaning.

Canadian Chamber lacks majority

Capital gains tax resolution fails

HALIFAX (CP) — Two separate proposals to abolish the capital gains tax were narrowly defeated Monday by delegates attending the 19th annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Both votes were in favor of abolition but did not carry because they lacked the required two-thirds majority. The first vote was 85-54 in favor of abolition but only 139 of the 157 voting delegates were present when the issue first came to the floor after a vigorous debate.

In the afternoon session, the vote on an Ottawa resolution was 69-30 for abolition.

One proposed adjustment was to apply the tax only to corporations, not individuals.

The tax on sales of assets or equity was introduced in the early 1970s amid much controversy as a means of establishing equity in the tax system.

The tax applies to such activities as profits made by corporations on sales of assets such as buildings or factories, or on individuals who make gains on sales of stocks or personal assets such as art or jewelry.

Tax on capital gains accounts for less than one per cent of the government's total tax revenue.

Delegates to the three-day convention, which ends today, dealt with a number of other resolutions, including one calling for elimination or reduction of government regulations which were approved.

They endorsed a resolution—the one which contained the controversial preamble on capital gains—to increase the basic investment tax to 10 per cent and to cut the basic corporate tax rate by one percentage point a year in a five-year period starting Jan. 1, 1979.

A proposal from a delegate from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., seeking a proper balance between the absolute requirements of the environment and the "need to sustain the health and growth of industry" was withdrawn but then later reintroduced and approved following a procedural vote.

The Ottawa delegation pushed through an amendment to a Vancouver resolution on mineral resources policy urging the federal government to provide Canadian producers with the same kind of financial assistance given to foreign industrial developers.

The reference was to such federal bodies as the Export Development Corp., which provides loans and credits to foreigners to encourage investment but not to Canadians.

Approved was a resolution urging Ottawa to encourage an aggressive reforestation program. The concern here was for recent federal spending cuts which have affected forestry research grants.

Delegates were concerned because forestry is a major industry in at least five Canadian provinces. An amendment was swiftly endorsed urging a joint federal-provincial effort to use monies saved from cuts in unemployment insurance to create jobs in reforestation projects.

One delegate said such a move could create 400,000 jobs in the industry.

On Canadian monetary policy, the convention accepted a watered down resolution urging the federal government to take the lead in reducing the governments' share of the gross national product.

Currently, governments' influence on the economy is equal to 42 per cent of the gross national product but some delegates wanted the resolution to specifically urge that this figure be reduced to 35 per cent over five years.

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer credit on the books of monthly-reporting credit holders totalled $27.1 billion at the end of July, up 14.1 per cent from a year earlier. Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Most of the total, $20.9 billion, was accounted for by chartered bank personal loans. The increase over the year in that category was 16.7 per cent.

Sales finance and consumer loan company loans were valued at $2.8 billion, while loans owned by consumers to department, furniture and appliance stores totalled $1.4 billion. Policy loans by life insurance companies were valued at $1.3 billion and personal loans by trust and mortgage companies totalled $580 million.

Wall St. Journal view on dollar sends it diving

MONTREAL (CP) — Heavy selling of the Canadian dollar on international money markets Monday sent it on its sharpest one-day drop since Aug. 25, as it lost nearly three-eighths of a cent against its American counterpart.

It closed at 85.54 U.S. cents on the inter-bank wholesale market, down 37-100 of a cent from Friday's closing rate of 85.91 cents.

Traders described the market as "one-way down" with big investors quickly selling their Canadian dollars for currencies they felt were more secure.

One senior trader linked the sudden selling binge to a lengthy analysis of the dollar's situation published Monday in the Wall Street Journal.

The article, described by the trader as very negative, "helped a lot of people make up their mind to sell Canada."

In the article, the influential financial daily quoted market participants as questioning an apparent lack of policy by the federal government to the dollar's slide.

"Everybody has been really concerned," the trader said. "They look at the government and say to themselves what they are doing."

In recent weeks the dollar, which was worth 86.99 cents on Sept. 1, has been at its lowest since May, 1933, when it was valued at 86.77 cents.

It had been hovering within 10 points of the psychologically important 85-cent margin for a week, and traders had expected it to remain there for the remainder of the month.

Lumber exports to zoom
VANCOUVER (CP) — By the year 2000, the Canadian forest industry will have to increase lumber exports by more than 50 per cent just to meet the demands of its currag markets, the chairman and chief executive officer of Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. said Monday.

Robert Rogers made that forecast while addressing the opening session of an international conference on transport and handling in the pulp and paper industry.

"To meet the demand of just its traditional markets in the U.S., Western Europe and Japan, the Canadian forest industry will have to increase exports in lumber by more than 50 per cent, wood pulp by 100 per cent and paper products by almost the same amount."

He said the estimates come from government projections of market expansions. Rogers said Canada now exports more than 60 per cent of its lumber, 35 per cent of its wood pulp and 80 per cent of its newsprint.

Europe keeps eye on stable Canada for investment

EDMONTON (CP) — Despite the present gloomy economic picture in Canada, European countries feel it is a worthwhile place for investment, said Max Von Podervils, West German ambassador to Canada.

"Canada is still one of the most stable countries," he said Saturday. "We look at Canada as a country with great sources of raw material."

Von Podervils is on a tour of Western Canada to meet with government and business leaders.

of Industries, a group of business and industrial leaders, will visit Canada before Christmas to meet with Prime Minister Trudeau and provincial premiers and discuss the possibility of future joint ventures.

"We want to maintain an interest in the Canadian business and economy," he said.

One of the current major European interests is the outcome of a $2.4-billion contract to supply 130 fighter aircraft to the Canadian Armed Forces.

Panavia, a British-German-Italian consortium, has a bid on the contract with its Tornado jet fighter, vying with four U.S. firms.

Von Podervils said both Canada and the Panavia company are looking into the long-term economic consequences of the firm's bid. If Canada purchased the Tornados, many of the plane's parts would be manufactured in Canada, he said.

"It would help the Canadian industry expand, would offer short-term employment for hundreds and would teach Canadians skills they could use in the future," Von Podervils said.

The contract would also lead to future economic ventures between European countries and Canada, he added.

EDC gives boost to construction

OTTAWA (CP) — The government-owned Export Development Corp. said Monday it is introducing a new insurance program to encourage construction companies to expand in overseas markets.

The corporation says in a release the program will be aimed at construction projects that normally would not qualify for surety assistance under other corporation programs because of the large proportion of local costs involved.

Among factors the EDC will try to take into account is whether construction jobs enhance Canada's technical reputation, help stabilize domestic industries or lead to follow-up orders, the release says.

Plenty is new at First City

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

City Savings and Trust Co. takes on a new image this week, both nationally and locally. It has opened a new walk-in savings branch on Fort Street, having moved the office from Douglas, and Wednesday will change the company name to First City Trust.

Company directors are meeting here Wednesday to formalize these events for the Vancouver-based company.

With the changes, subsidiary companies will also bear the First City name and logo. Among them are Citrust Developments Ltd., First City Capital Ltd., PLC Investments Ltd. and Villa Properties Ltd.

Branch Manager Nick Melber said in an interview Monday First City's Victoria office is expected to be a far-runner of what the company is attempting to achieve in customer relations.

"We want to be a sort of 'store-front' operation and fit into the street where we're located. Anybody will be able to walk right through to the View Street parkade and to the street beyond," he said.

Melber went on to point out the decor which features murals of Victoria at the turn of the century. But it also has more than a few plants and pictures.

The manager showed a type of special chair, one that was designed to accommodate senior citizens who find many kinds of office-type furniture difficult from which to arise. The arms are specially constructed to take the heaviest of heavyweights.

Melber went on to say that similar branches are in the planning stages for two locations in Ontario.

The Victoria branch opened 10 years ago.

The new location is on the former site of a drugstore, directly across the street from the new Royal Bank of Canada main branch, and between a bakery and a music store.

Vice-president marketing services Mel Jue said that First City has recognized the fact that it must harmonize its appearance with closeby neighbors and said that more traditional kinds of financial institutions tend to block off the flow of customers from neighboring businesses. This new approach should ease this problem, First City claims.

Export Corp. showing profit

Made-in-Canada success

CALGARY (CP) — Canadian-made water-bombers are flying in Greece, Alberta-made petroleum equipment is working in the Soviet Union and mining equipment from Canada is producing gold and copper in the Philippines.

The made-in-Canada label is appearing in an increasing number of foreign countries and the Export Development Corp. (EDC) is claiming much of the credit.

The federal Crown corporation was established in 1969 to provide financial services to Canadian exporters and their overseas customers.

Last year, it provided more than $2.6 billion in services to exporters and signed $1.2 billion in loans to borrowers in 25 foreign countries.

But the corporation, run by a 12-man board of directors composed of seven civil servants and five private businessmen appointed by the cabinet, is determined not to look like a welfare agency.

The net profits last year were $18.7 million, up six per cent from 1976.

"A deal has to be pretty damned solid or else we won't do it," says Hal Godwin of Calgary, who sits on the board of directors.

"EDC has never lost a dollar. We've had loans rescheduled (renegotiated) but we've never had a borrower say he wasn't going to pay a loan."

EDC has outstanding loans and lending commitments totalling about $4.8 billion supporting Canadian goods and services abroad, but the money never leaves Canada, says Godwin. Loans are made to foreign purchasers but the money is actually paid to the exporter. The corporation's apparent desire to appear as a group of hard-nosed businessmen might account for some of the controversy surrounding it.

It recently agreed to lend more than $17 million to two United States paper mills to purchase Canadian equipment for expanding operations. The mills compete with Canadian mills, prompting criticism that the corporation supports foreign competition to Canadian industry.

But EDC President John MacDonald says: "We are simply here to support exports. If all the commercial criteria are met by the exporter and the buyer-borrower, then we will undertake the project."

The company argues that deals such as those with the U.S. paper mills would go ahead whether the loans come from Canada or some other source and that it's to Canada's advantage to have its goods and services employed.

This year the EDC will enter a new era as it cuts its ties with the federal purse. The company plans to meet all future capital requirements through bond issues in the international money market. Until 1972, the EDC received all its funds from a federal government fund.

It then began supplementing its financing by issuing short-term notes in the Canadian money market. In 1976, it began borrowing through

It said this summer's wheat and early rice harvests were up 10 million tons from last year despite drought, but gave no specific figures.

Suit threat follows Ali tirade

Action racially motivated champ says

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Angered by Muhammad Ali's charges that a $1-million damage suit was racially inspired, two promoters of the Ali-Leon Spinks heavyweight fight said Monday night they will sue Ali for $10 million unless he returns to town and apologizes.

"Muhammad Ali is the greatest moral coward I have ever seen," said an obviously angered Jake DiMaggio at a late-night news conference.

"I call on him to return to New Orleans and look at every piece of paper connected with this fight and apologize for what he said."

In a bitter and abusive afternoon speech, Ali had referred to DiMaggio and city councilman Philip Ciccio as "them white daggers" and said they were stealing funds from promotion of the fight from the very outset.

DiMaggio and Ciccio, white partners in Louisiana Sports Inc., which promoted the fight locally, said Ali had done them and the city an injustice with his statements.

"The black community and black people everywhere owe a debt of gratitude to Jake DiMaggio and Philip Ciccio," DiMaggio said. "Ali was used, Ali was misguided, for selfish reasons, by other people."

"Ali's attorney has apologized and that's not good enough. His manager, Herbert Muhammad, has apologized and that's not good enough. We want him to come back and face us."

All also told reporters that two black members of Louisiana Sports—Sherman Copelin and Don Hubbard—were innocent of any wrongdoing and were victims of bigotry.

All's comments were promoted by a $1 million suit by DiMaggio and Ciccio against Copelin and Hubbard. That suit, filed Saturday, was dropped before Ali spoke with reporters.

Ciccio and DiMaggio said later Monday evening that legal action was still pending against Butch Lewis, a defendant in the suit and a former officer of Top Rank Inc., which owned the overall rights to the fight.

In their suit, the two white businessmen accused Copelin, Hubbard and Lewis—all black men—of conspiring to divert money and contracts away from Louisiana Sports Inc., the group which put up $3.5 million to buy rights to the live gate for the fight.

"I expected this when I saw that jam-packed house," Ali said. "I said to myself, 'Oh, Oh, this is too successful for the night to go smooth.'"

"Many sources were upset because they lost money betting against me. I'm a Muslim, and I'm black and I'm cocky, and that hurt so many bigots."

"Would you believe no blonde hair and no blue eyes involved? Would you believe no white man involved in the brain work?"

Ali said it was an atmosphere of racism which spawned the suit.

"I can't tell you exactly what they're suing about, but they can," he said, with a gesture to Lewis, Copelin and Hubbard.

DiMaggio and Ciccio had complained—among other things—of a $200,000 finder's fee that Hubbard and Copelin were to receive from Top Rank, which held the rights to the fight. The fee was to have been paid to Corporate Management Inc., which the two own.

Hubbard and Lewis said the fee was a legitimate business deal consummated months before the formation of Louisiana Sports Inc., of which Copelin and Hubbard were later made principal officers.

The money was to be paid in two installments—$50,000 immediately and another $150,000 within 24 hours of the fight. Hubbard said he was entitled to the money since he had worked hard to land the fight.

He also said that a complete accounting of ticket sales would be made within the week.

The suit said that Copelin and Hubbard had agreed to pay Lewis personally $200,000, although he was employed as a vice-president of Top Rank, from whom LSI bought rights to the live gate.

Lewis said he never got the money and hadn't expected it, although Hubbard said Lewis had performed numerous personal services for the promotion and was entitled to be paid.

Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, said Friday that he had fired Lewis. Lewis said Monday that he quit and plans to go into business for himself.

"He (Arum) knows that I, in fact, may be a threat to Top Rank," Lewis said. "I had thought that Bob and I could have continued to co-promote some events, work together and help each other."

Hubbard said he, Copelin, DiMaggio and Ciccio met Sunday night and came away as friends.

Decision deferred

CHICAGO (AP) — Muhammad Ali has no intention at this time of retiring without another defence of his heavyweight boxing crown, spokesmen for the champion said Monday.

Any decision on whom to fight, when and where will not be made for at least eight months, however, said Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager.

Equestrian roundup

Canadian riders win

The four-member Canadian team, headed by Mark Ishoy of Woodbridge, Ont., and Juliet Bishop of Calgary, won the world Three-Day Event equestrian championship Sunday in Lexington, Ky.

Bruce Davidson of the U.S. took his second consecutive individual title at the Kentucky Horse Park but his American team-mates were dethroned by the Canadians.

The final day of stadium jumping was marred by a serious fall in which Caroline Treviranus of the United States suffered a head injury. She was listed in serious, then critical, condition.

Davidson, who rode second Sunday after entering the day with a nearly insurmountable lead, clinched the title after he received only 20 penalty points for a final mark of 93.4.

Ireland's John Weston finished second and West Germany's Helmut Rethemeier third ahead of American Ralph Hill, who had entered the day's competition in second place.

Canada was the only team which did not lose one of its members in Saturday's cross-country competition, and won the title based on the lowest three scores each day from Cathy Wedge, 26, of Saskatoon, Elizabeth Ashton, 27, of Orangeville, Ont., Ishoy, 22, and Bishop, 23.

Ishoy finished eighth in the over-all competition on Law 'N' Order with 134.5 penalty points and Bishop placed ninth on Sumatra with 143.4 points. Ashton was 11th on Sunrise with 158.7 points and Wedge, on Abracadabra, wound up further down the list among 47 riders with 312.95 points.

Treviranus, 24, of Berryville, Va., was knocked unconscious during the stadium jumping competition, the final phase of the three-day world championships. Her horse, Comic Relief, faltered at the 10th jump on the 12-jump course and tossed her.

In Calgary, meanwhile, Britain won this year's Spruce Meadows Masters Horse Show on Sunday and Britain's Caroline Bradley, established as one of the world's finest riders, won the $15,000 Rothman's Grand Prix of Canada.

Twenty-seven horses from six countries started the grand prix, but only Michael Seywell of Britain cleared the tough course.

Bradley, although she went without a jumping fault, picked up a one-half time fault in the opening dash.

She made no mistake in the second round, brushing a couple of fences lightly, but ending fault-free.

Seywell appeared to have it won until he hit the final jump, chopping down a rail for four faults and second place.

Once, Claire believed she had the greatest job in the world.

Square Claire, her friends tease her, and Claire is the first to agree. She's never fancied a career. Liberation is not her style.

The only fulfillment she ever wanted was to marry the man she loved and raise a happy family.

You wouldn't think of Claire as a candidate for a drinking problem—but you'd be wrong.

The trouble began with her husband's success. The more demanding his work became, the less time he had for Claire.

Now it's the children. Suddenly they're independent young adults, eager to be off on their own.

Claire feels lost and no longer needed. Alone at home, she's started drinking to pass the time, hoping that would somehow solve things.

Of course, it won't. There isn't a beer, a wine or a spirit made that can cure loneliness or, indeed, any unhappy situation. Qualified professional help is what Claire should trust to get out from under her problem.

The wisdom of enjoying a drink sensibly is easy enough to accept when things are going well. But it's when the going gets rough that moderation is even more vital to remember.

It's back to fundamental drills for Lions after another setback

Jerry Tagge is not washed up as a Canadian Football League quarterback, says head coach Vic Rapp of British Columbia Lions.

"He was down before and he came back," Rapp said about Tagge following the Lions' fourth consecutive defeat, 14-4, Sunday in Calgary against the Stampede.

Rapp said that Tagge and backup Gary Keithley will go back to a training camp situation today when the Lions begin preparation for their next game—Sept. 24 in Winnipeg against the Blue Bombers.

In other Sunday action, Edmonton Eskimos tightened their hold on first place with a 25-20 win over Saskatchewan Roughriders and Montreal Alouettes knocked off Hamilton Tiger-Cats 14-4 in an Eastern Conference game at Olympic Stadium.

Tagge and Keithley combined to throw three interceptions against the Stamps and Tagge, the Western Football Conference's outstanding player in 1977, was particularly ineffective.

"We're going to have to abandon even working on the running game," said Rapp.

"We've got to concentrate everything on passing."

"We're going to go back to keeping stats on the quarterbacks like in camp. We're going to put those two guys in competition with each other and whoever comes out ahead is going to play (in Winnipeg)."

"They're going to play six football games—five during the week and one on Sunday."

Tagge completed only six of 18 passes against Calgary for 49 yards, with two interceptions, while Keithley was good on two of four attempts for only five yards. Keithley also threw an interception deep in B.C. territory which set up the only touchdown of the game, early in the second half.

"He shouldn't have thrown that ball at all," said Rapp, who sent in Keithley in the third quarter after Tagge failed to move the club. James Sykes' two-yard touchdown run marked the B.C. defence allowed the opposition to score a touchdown.

Kicker Cyril McFall booted two field goals, added a single and converted Sykes' touchdown.

Lui Passaglia accounted for all of B.C.'s scoring with a single and a field goal.

Lions, with seven players on the injury list, suffered another blow when wide receiver Leon Bright was forced head-first into the Calgary bench three minutes into the game, breaking his nose. Terry Irvin was assessed a penalty on the play.

Rapp said the Lions would not bring in a new quarterback because "at this stage it doesn't do any damn good... it takes too long to learn the system."

"To change quarterbacks now would be admitting we're getting ready for next year," he added. "And we're sure as hell not."

Tagge, who as a hometown hero previously failed to make it big with Green Bay Packers of the National Football League, said the current situation here is even more frustrating than it was in Green Bay.

"What bothers me is that I had some respect around this league," Tagge said. "I don't know how much I have left any more."

The Lions are 3-5-2 this season and four points behind second-place Winnipeg in the WFC and two back of Calgary. The Stampede also have a game in hand on B.C.

In Regina, defensive back Joe Hollimon's third-quarter interception for a 72-yard touchdown moved Edmonton into an 18-7 lead. The Roughriders made a spirited comeback attempt in the fourth as quarterback Ron Lancaster ran for a one-yard touchdown and threw a seven-yard touchdown pass to tight end Bob Richardson with less than two minutes remaining.

But the Eskimos had built an insurmountable lead on quarterback Tom Wilkinson's 14-yard pass to Stu Lang earlier in the quarter.

Larry Washington scored the other Edmonton touchdown.

Dave Cutler converted all three, booted a 21-yard field goal and added a single.

A Lancaster pass to newcomer Freeman Johns accounted for the third Saskatchewan touchdown.

Kicker Bob Macoritti converted two of the three.

In Montreal, Canadian quarterback Gerry Dattilio directed the Alouettes to three first-half field goals by Don Sweet. Dattilio, pressed into service by a succession of injuries to Montreal signal-callers, was relieved for the second half by newcomer Tom Shuman, cut by Hamilton earlier this season.

Shuman, who had to fill in for Dattilio after the Canadian reported sore ribs, said he got hit in the third quarter and didn't remember the period.

Altogether, Sweet kicked four field goals and Wally Buono had two second-half singles to complete the Alouettes scoring.

Nick Jambrosic kicked a 40-yard field goal in the third quarter and a single in the second to account for Hamilton's points.

N.S. hires Archie Moore

HALIFAX (CP) — Former world light heavyweight boxing champion Archie Moore has been hired on a one-year contract to help develop the amateur boxing program in Nova Scotia, officials here announced Monday.

"In earlier, very short visits to this province, the reaction to Moore and his sincerity was tremendous," said Harland Hastings, president of the Nova Scotia branch of the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association.

"I am sure this year-long project will prove fruitful for all Nova Scotians."

Moore is scheduled to conduct boxing clinics across the province for competitors and coaches and, among other things, hold discussions with young people in schools throughout Nova Scotia on drug dependency problems.

"Archie Moore is far bigger than just boxing," Hastings said. "If there is any sports group he can help, we will try to get him there."

Moore held the world light heavyweight boxing crown from 1956 until 1965. During his career he had 136 knockouts. He fought twice for the world heavyweight title, losing both times.

ROOKIE RUNNING BACK James Sykes of Calgary sidesteps Lions' defensive back John Beaten on way to substantial gain during Sunday action in Calgary where the Stamps earned a 14-4 win over B.C.

Cougars trim roster, Robertson sidelined

Victoria Cougars, deep in centres when training camp for the Western Hockey League club opened, will be using a leftwinger in the spot tonight as a seven-game exhibition series against New Westminster Bruins continues at Courtenay.

Manager-coach Jack Shupe dropped four players from the roster Monday, including two centres, and said hold-over George Robertson, the team's leading scorer last season, will be sidelined until Friday with a pulled muscle in his left shoulder.

Robertson suffered the injury Friday night in Lake

Cowichan when he tangled twice with Bruin defenceman Boris Elstic. The 19-year-old centre missed games in Powell River on Saturday and Nanaimo on Sunday but is expected to be ready for Friday's game here against the Bruins.

Bruins, who played to a 5-5 tie on Friday, scored a 5-4 win Saturday and came back for a 2-2 tie on Sunday to run their exhibition record to 4-0-2.

"We've got five leftwingers so George Fritz will move over to centre for the three games (Wednesday in Campbell River, Thursday in Gold River), Shupe said.

Monday's cuts reduced the roster to 21, two over the league limit, and Shupe said he will drop a goalkeeper and a forward before the home opener Sept. 30 against Calgary Wranglers.

Goalkeeper Paul Fricker of Vancouver is the only non-Vancouver Islander among the newcomers. The two new defencemen are Tony Feltrin of Nanaimo and Robert Jacobson of Victoria.

Holdovers Mike Shields and Mickey Willgress scored for the Cougars on Sunday and Terry Kirkham and John Ogronick, with his 14th goal in six pre-season games, scored for the Bruins before about 1,000 fans.

Bruins held a 35-31 edge in shots and Eastman and Fricker played 30 minutes each in the Cougar net, allowing one goal apiece.

B.C. hockey association readjusts fee structure

CRANBROOK (CP) — The annual meeting of the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association voted in favor of a new method of assessing the fee paid to the association by its members.

More than 300 delegates voted at the weekend meeting after learning the withdrawal this year of Spokane Flyers from the Western International Hockey League means an annual loss for the BCAHA of more than $8,000 in gate assessments and registrations.

The BCAHA would have had to operate with a $3,000 deficit if the assessing methods had not been readjusted. Previously, two per cent of the total gate per game went to the BCAHA.

With the restructuring, senior leagues will pay $35 a game including exhibition, regular season and playoffs while Junior A will be assessed $25 a game but will not be charged for exhibition games.

Junior B will be assessed $10 a game, Intermediate A $15 and Intermediate B $5.

Delegates defeated a resolution calling for Junior B players to wear face masks starting this season because of increased insurance claims resulting from player injuries.

Delegates, however, approved a resolution sponsored by the BCAHA to increase insurance payments for Junior B players this season. This means insurance fees for Junior B will be $6 a player compared with $3 last year.

A resolution was defeated to double the mutual aid payments for minor hockey players to $2 from $1 a year.

For the eighth consecutive year, delegates defeated a resolution by the Kelowna Minor Hockey Association that a tier system be set up in minor hockey. The resolution resulted from lopsided scores in provincial playoffs.

The BCAHA formed an executive committee that will report on the tier system in minor hockey at the next annual meeting in Penticton.

Bob Mullock of North Vancouver was re-elected for a second term as association president and delegates approved the 1980 annual meeting for Victoria.

Dolphins held scoreless again

Going scoreless for their third consecutive game, Victoria Dolphins watched their B.C. Junior Big Four football playoff chances dwindle Sunday when they dropped a 25-0 decision to Richmond Raiders at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

At 1-5, Dolphins still nurse slim hopes of a berth in the playoffs. They play their final home game Sunday against Surrey Rams, then conclude their season the following weekend against first-place Vancouver Maraloms.

Dolphins, who last scored a point while beating Richmond 14-13 on Aug. 27, picked up only eight first downs to Richmond's 13 and managed just 93 yards total offense, 11 rushing. Raiders, who led 8-0 at half-time, ground out 263 yards rushing, adding only six in the air.

Victoria lost three fumbles and were victims of three interceptions.

John Bowerman galloped for three touchdowns with rushes of one, 18 and 11 yards. Jim Nason booted three converts, a single and a 31-yard field goal.

Juan de Fuca Dolphins had no easier sailing Sunday, getting thumped 57-0 by Saanich Hornets in Island Juvenile League action. Hornets, who rolled up a 41-0 advantage at the half, picked up their second successive shutout.

Guy Prevost and Kim Munro each scored three touchdowns and Munro chipped in six converts. Tom Graham added a touchdown and single and Greg Frame scored one touchdown. Dean Craven supplied a two-point conversion.

In Island bantam league play, Saanich Vampires walloped Saanich Hornets 74-8 and Oak Bay Invaders outdistanced Nanaimo Trojans 23-13. Bob Holland scored two touchdowns for Oak Bay and Terry Dusterwald collected two for Nanaimo.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A disgruntled fan who tossed his binoculars at National Football League referees was arrested after the glasses hit a policeman at the Superdome. The incident occurred after the Saints lost to Philadelphia Eagles 24-17 Sunday.

The fan, Earl Gervys of Monroe, La., was charged with aggravated battery after his binoculars hit officer Bruce Weatherford. Weatherford was cut on the head and received stitches to close the wound.

Allison roars to easy victory

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Bobby Allison, who spent three days in a hospital last week undergoing blood tests, took advantage of tire problems for season leader Cale Yarborough and scored an easy victory in Sunday's Delaware 500 stock car race.

In winning his third race of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing season and the 49th of his career, Allison broke a three-race string of triumphs by General Motors products and a personal seven-month victory drought. He drove a Ford Thunderbird.

Allison's average speed was 119.363 miles an hour. He finished first by 19.7 seconds, ahead of runner-up Yarborough in an Oldsmobile.

Cities gather to tackle B.C. municipal sorepoints

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist reporter
Hundreds of municipal and regional politicians from every part of the province assemble in Penticton on Wednesday for the annual convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

For 75 years, representatives of grass-roots government have met in this fashion to forge a united front against the provincial government, from which all regional and municipal power flows.

A major part of the convention is taken up by the debate and the adoption or rejection of resolutions. And it is the resolutions which better than anything else portray municipal and regional unrest with the status-quo.

This year, delegates to the convention will debate 103 resolutions, ranging from internal UBCM administrative policies to B.C. Municipal Act matters, from assessment and property taxation rules to education costs, from grants to pollution legislation.

A total of 11 resolutions has been submitted by Greater Victoria's four core municipalities, four each by Saanich and Oak Bay, two by Victoria and one by Esquimalt.

There are no resolutions from Central Saanich, North Saanich, Sidney or the Capital Region Board.

Victoria wants the provincial government to take a look at the impact of increased taxation on primary industry and the city also wants assessment equity between apartments and other residential classes.

Saanich wants special compensation for council members who have to spend money on special services for the municipality "beyond the regular duties of council."

Saanich also wants owners of strata title residences to have a combined vote only in matters of local improvement petitions.

Saanich's third resolution calls for an end to the practice permitting the subdivision of land parcels for a relative and the last one urges the provincial government to equalize assessment, easing the tax burden for single-family homeowners.

From Oak Bay comes a resolution calling on the provincial government not to phase out land-use contracts. Oak Bay also isn't happy with recent amendments to the Municipal Act, requiring a simple majority for zoning changes.

Oak Bay also wants the government to pay full taxes on university land and the municipality asks the federal government to pick up the tab for any oil spills that might occur and to reimburse municipalities for the cost of cleaning up beaches.

Esquimalt has only one resolution on the order paper. It is similar to a resolution submitted by the other three municipalities, calling for a better assessment deal for single-family homeowners.

'Sunset legislation' urged for crown corporations

Delegates to the Canadian Chambers of Commerce convention in Halifax have urged the federal government to review its tribunals, commissions and crown corporations with the idea of scrapping those which are no longer necessary.

The call for "sunset legislation" came in a resolution approved Monday by a near-unanimous vote of more than 750 delegates.

Brian Small, manager of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said in an interview from Halifax that for the first time in years, the West was represented by more than 50 per cent of the delegates.

"And we're sending some pretty strong messages to Ottawa," Small said.

The sunset legislation, he said, was called for by the convention because too many federal bodies never had to justify their existence once they are created.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

I have often heard some of my fellow backyard gardeners boasting of the crop of apples or other fruit taken from their pet trees, or of the size and weight of an individual fruit.

Actually, the excellence and health of a fruit tree can be judged far more accurately by the size, number and color of its leaves.

One crop of fruit doesn't mean very much, for a tree which has suffered an injury or is in ill health will often put forth a terrific crop of fruit in one last desperate effort to make seed and thereby perpetuate the race.

In fact, one way a reluctant and unfruitful tree can be shocked into producing blossoms and fruit is by deliberately inflicting an injury; for instance, by carving a narrow ring in its bark, or by pruning away some of its roots, or even by digging the thing up and replanting it right back in the same hole.

A tree which has an abundance of large leaves of a good green color is obviously in good health, though, and cannot help but become productive in its own good time.

It is the leaves which manufacture the complex nutrients that go to make and swell the fruits and you need at least 60 square inches of leaf surface to develop just one good-sized apple.

Even more leaf surface than this is required to produce the food reserves to foster and support next year's crop of blossoms and extension growth.

Apple leaves will vary somewhat in size from one variety to another, but generally speaking, a tree in glowing health should make leaves four inches long and from 2½ to 3 inches across at its widest part. About six such leaves are required to keep one apple developing steadily to a good size, and I know some really green-thumbed gardeners who thin out the young fruitlets on their trees until each fruit has at least 20 leaves working to support it.

Four-inch leaves are the exception rather than the rule in most backyard gardens, which is one reason why the fruit is so often disappointing. And not only are the leaves undersized in the home garden, but they are often sparse, with thin, wandlike branches poorly furnished near the trunk. Their color, too, is often anaemic.

The reason is nearly always neglect and malnutrition. The vegetable plot gets all the manure available, and the flower beds and the lawns are dressed with fertilizer, but the poor one tree is expected to forage for itself. As a matter of fact, a fruit tree is a much more complex creature than any vegetable, and deserves better care.

When a tree is hungry, it displays unmistakable signals. The leaves are undersized and pale, or sometimes tinted and discolored. Iron is often lacking in its diet, showing up in the leaf as pale green areas between dark green veins. The extension growth at the branch tips is slow and thin.

When these signs are observed, it is high time to put your tree on a rich and nourishing diet. If it is growing in cultivated ground, give it a good dressing of a complete fertilizer, about one cupful per square yard, applied in a band four feet wide circling the tree out under the outermost tips of the branches; it does no good at all to spread fertilizer close in to the trunk.

Make sure your tree doesn't go short of water. A thick mulch of old rotted manure spread in the same branch-tip area is a useful supplement to the fertilizer.

If growing in sod, use a Ross Root feeder, or punch a number of holes in the sod with a crowbar, again in a 4-foot band out under the root tips, making them a foot deep and a foot apart each way. Fill these holes with a fertilizer solution made by dissolving high-test soluble fertilizer in water, one tbs. per gallon. Repeat every second week through the growing season.

Jack Smith

We had no plan on our long week off except to keep a leisurely pace, which meant simply observing the 55 m.p.h. speed limit and checking into a motel with a swimming pool in midafternoon.

Also, we made a sort of road game of avoiding chain restaurants, no matter how hungry we might be. At night before lights out, or in the morning over coffee, we unfolded our California road map and loosely plotted our next leg.

So it was only an option when we turned off Highway 101 above Santa Barbara and went up through the San Marcos Pass and on to Solvang. When we had last seen Solvang, a decade or two ago, it was rather small and quaint, truly a village that seemed little more than it had started out to be, a place where Danish immigrants could live in a style nostalgic of their homeland, with small dairy farms, windmills and a bakery that turned out honest Danish bread and pastries.

"I bet they won't have a McDonald's," I predicted. It was a Saturday. Solvang looked half as big and twice as crowded as Copenhagen. We drifted helplessly into the traffic stream and crept half-way through town, passing blocks of quaint storefronts and nudging swarms of tourists before we could work our way out. It was the kind of traffic you would have if automobiles were allowed in Disneyland.

North of town, as we escaped, we saw what appeared to be a villa on a hilltop. It probably belonged, I thought, to the man and wife who had owned that first little bakery, rich now beyond their dreams.

We passed hillsides colored orange by marigolds, and here and there an old barn, some of them sound and freshly painted, some infirm and askew, the Mail Pouch ads ghostlike on their sieved roofs, their shingles worn almost transparent; one looked so fragile it seemed certain to blow away in the first September wind, like the ash on a dead cigar. Like old ladies' hats, the old barns were no longer needed, but too precious, too evocative of an earlier America, to be thrown away.

We came to a place called Los Olivos, so hungry by now that we might have surrendered to a Jack-in-the-Box. Downtown Los Olivos was two blocks long. There was no Jack-in-the-Box, no McDonald's, no Sambo's. The only eating place we saw was at the main corner. It was a plain frame building from the 1920s or earlier, I guessed, with a handpainted sign: Windmill Farms: A Natural Foods Garden Cafe & Market.

There was a gas station across the street: a tin shed with three old pumps. At the center of the intersection stood a pyramid of brown stones supporting a steel flagpole from which Old Glory flew. I parked by a pickup truck, the only other vehicle outside the cafe, and walked out to look at the monument. "April 1918" was all the legend said, evidently in memory of the Los Olivos boys who had not come home from the First World War.

"Anyway," I said, as we walked into the Windmill Farms, "it doesn't look like a chain."

Windmill Farms had been refurbished inside, and had come out rather quaint. The walls were knotty pine. The windows had stained glass inserts. There was a framed Renoir on one wall and a macramé on another. There were potted ferns, a dracena by an antique upright piano and a grape ivy hanging in one window. A girl in a peasant dress was sweeping the new plank floor, like Cinderella. Somewhere a radio was blaring rock.

"Are you open?" I asked, seeing no other patrons.

"Oh yes," she said. "I'll turn down the radio." She had sized us up correctly.

My appetite had survived the words "natural foods" on the cafe's sign. I always think of natural foods as what my father used to call rabbit food. Neither was I reassured by the menu. My wife ordered something called a Zorba sandwich. I ordered the Greek salad plate, which was described as being composed of "fresh spinach, lettuce, cucumbers, red onions, imported feta cheese and Greek olives served with brown bread." Rabbit food for sure, but it would give my greens for the day. Anyway, I love Greek olives, those tiny, black wrinkled ones, slightly bitter.

"I'm sorry," the peasant girl said when she set the plate before me, "we're out of the olives. Would you like a substitute?"

"There is no substitute," I told her, but without rancor. After all, a hungry man does not wander into a rural southern California town two blocks long on a hot August afternoon and expect to find Mediterranean delicacies. Besides, the salad was crisp and refreshing, and we got back on the road with the satisfaction of having eluded the chain food conspiracy again.

I was worried, though, about that unexpected quaintness in the Windmill Farms. Had Los Olivos, like Solvang, been visited by the ghost of Walt Disney? Was all of California going quaint?

But the road ahead held an even more astonishing monument to the quaintening of America.

Sydney Harris

I recently spied an amusing (but more than amusing) cartoon in a magazine. A young man, rejected by his girl, puts on his hat to leave, with the parting shot: "If I had all the qualities you want in a man, I'd propose to somebody else!"

This cartoonist (who, incidentally, happens to be a woman) put her finger on the pathetic flaw in the romantic attitude toward life. The romanticist is interested in finding the right person; while the realist wants to be the right person.

The girl in the cartoon — like so many others in life — had never stopped to ask herself this crucial question: "Suppose I find a man who embodies most of the qualities I admire and demand — will this kind of man be interested in me?"

In most cases, the answer is a melancholy "no." The romanticist is usually so busy looking outside that little time is left for looking inside, for examining one's own attributes and abilities, for trying to become the kind of person that He or She would be attracted to over the long pull.

Romanticists are disappointed in love not so much because the ideal does not come along, but because even when he does, he passes on after a brief look. He, too, has an ideal, and refuses to be satisfied with the commonplace.

The overpowering barrage of stories, films and advertisements in modern North American life creates romanticists by the millions — young men and women who become so seduced by the superficial aspects of "beauty" and "charm" that they never take a realistic look into their own nature. They expect the best; but they do not prepare to take advantage of it, should it happen.

They are taught (with insidious commercial untruth) that romance is climaxed at the altar; but real love only begins there. Marriage guarantees nothing, except responsibilities; and people who have failed to build up their inner resources soon find that there is no "right" person — there is only a "rightness" between persons, and this takes two rights.

Young people need not lower their romantic aims; they should want the best, turning down all dull compromises; but then they have an obligation to raise and transform themselves into the kind of person who also deserves the best.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — The producer of the show at Scandals, Hollywood's first major night club since the '40s, is Gladys Rockmill, who, incidentally, opens a new Alexis Smith musical at the Mark Hellinger Theater on Broadway in November.

Gladys, an old friend, once was married to Milton Rockmill, onetime head of Universal Pictures, who once accused me of trying to beat his time with Joan Crawford — but that's another story.

Gladys' Broadway-bound show is called Platinum and is heavily backed by Paramount. It's the story of an old-time movie star a la Crawford whose hit recordings are brought back with disco beat. The show takes place in a recording studio and the star and rock musician have a torrid love story. You can see right now that Paramount has it earmarked for John Travolta.

Gladys has another claim to fame. She once had a boutique in Palm Springs at the Racquet Club and hired a beautiful model who once had been a showgirl at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas. This model used to walk around the Racquet Club wearing Gladys' creations and, before long, she was Barbara Marx and now Mrs. Frank Sinatra.

The club isn't really finished yet but one thing that was working were huge laser beams outside that shook up a few drunks emerging from the club.

The dance floor hasn't been laid yet in the discotheque but it didn't stop the beat from going on. The place was jammed with dancers on concrete.

Club president Leonard Grant, who was famous many years ago as Sidney Skoloff's son-in-law, heads a syndicate that put $2.5 million into redoing what was once Edna Earle's Fogcutter Restaurant. Actor George Maharis is one of the investors.

If it works, it can revive the old days of Hollywood when Ciro's, the Macambo and the Cocoanut Grove were the playgrounds of the stars.

All Scandals needs are modern reincarnations of Bogey and Errol Flynn to start a few one-punch battles and get the club on page one.

Soccer player dies after fall

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Valtencir, a Brazilian professional soccer player, died Sunday after he broke his spine as a result of a fall during a game before a crowd of 15,000 in Maringa, in the southern state of Parana. He was 32.

Valtencir was taken from the field unconscious and died minutes later, doctors said. The accident happened at the 32nd minute of the first half, when Valtencir's team, Colorado, and Maringa were playing a scoreless tie. The game was suspended at that point.

Doctors said that the player fell in a bad position after heading a high ball, and broke the upper part of his spine.

In the 1960s he was a member of the Brazilian national team.

Filion's close to pace-setter

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Herve Filion, thanks to a record eight victories on one racing program, remains close behind leading Carmine Abbatiello in the United States Trotting Association's North American driving race.

Filion, from Angers, Que., used his big day at Hinsdale Raceway in New Hampshire on Sept. 9 to stay within three triumphs of Abbatiello, from latest statistics released Monday. Filion had 288 victories and Abbatiello 301.

The pair were leading in the race for the money-winning harness racing crown this season. Abbatiello's horses have won $2,383,788 and Filion's assignments have accounted for $2,259,378.

Daryl Busse was third with 221 victories, Gilles Gendron of Montreal was fourth at 203 and Ron Waples of Durham, Ont., fifth at 198.

League signs 35th official

NEW YORK (CP) — Scotty Morrison, the National Hockey League's referee in chief, announced Monday that Ken Pierce has been added to the league's officiating staff.

Pierce, a 28-year-old from Westchester, Ill., became an overnight celebrity during last April's world hockey championships in Prague when he was selected to referee both the semi-final and final games on the same day.

Morrison said Pierce, a former linesman in the World Hockey Association with previous refereeing experience in the defunct North American and Southern leagues, brings to 35 the number of officials the NHL has under contract for the 1978-79 season.

He will work this season under an NHL contract in the American, Central and International leagues.

Male, female pros to clash

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — Women pro golfers will compete with men for the first time in a major pro-am event at a $100,000 tournament scheduled for Jan. 3-6 on three Monterey Peninsula courses, tournament founder Harold B. Firstman announced Monday.

Firstman said three top women pros—Jane Blalock, Pat Bradley and Sally Little—are committed to the tournament. They will compete with 27 men from the Professional Golfers' Association tour, 46 club pros and 234 amateurs.

The tournament, long considered a tuneup for the PGA tour, is the largest pro-am event not scheduled on the tour.

Gerry's back, Claude quits

Veteran goalie Gerry Cheevers surprised Boston Bruins by skating alone for 15 minutes Monday, one month after knee surgery as the National Hockey League team opened its training camp at Fitchburg, Mass.

Cheevers' left knee was repaired last month after an accident at his home. The goalie aggravated a knee injury he suffered during the 1977-78 season.

Meanwhile, St. Louis Blues announced right winger Claude Larose's retirement following a 14-season National Hockey League career with three clubs.

The 36-year-old Larose, primarily a checking forward, scored 29 goals in 1976-77 but fell off to eight last year. In 943 regular-season NHL games, he totalled 887 points.

Streck streaks to crown

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)

Obscure Ron Streck, who came into the $200,000 Texas Open in danger of losing his Professional Golfers Association tour card, really wasn't himself over the weekend. Just ask Hubert Green, Lon Hinkle and Ben Crenshaw.

Streck, 24, of Tulsa, Okla., who had to scramble Friday to barely make the two-round cut at even-par 140, fired a seven-under-par 63 on Saturday and a withering 62 Sunday to capture a storied one-stroke victory worth $40,000.

"I'm still a little bit in shock, I think," he said after finishing a stroke ahead of Hinkle and Green and two strokes ahead of Crenshaw. "I feel very, very lucky to win, especially the way I've been playing this year."

"I just barely made the cut," added Streck. "I just wanted to put two good rounds together to show everybody I could."

What he did was to post the best back-to-back rounds on the PGA tour this year. Before that, his only claim to fame was playing on the same Tulsa University team for two years with LPGA star Nancy Lopez and tying for 14th at the 1978 Quad Cities Open.

"The guy shoots a 63 and a 62. What can you say?" said a stunned Crenshaw, the leader through the second and third rounds before floundering with a 69 Sunday.

Streck has averaged 74 strokes per round this year and was 150th on the money list with $6,933 before the Texas Open—his third-to-last chance to either cement a place in the Top 100 or win.

Otherwise, he would be forced to return to the PGA qualifying school.

On Thursday, Streck shot a miserable 73 in his first round on the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course.

Knowing he needed to par the final hole in the second round to make the cut, Streck blasted out of a sand trap and dropped in a tricky six-foot par putt. He later said that was probably the most pressure he felt the entire tournament.

Only Streck's mother and father—and an unidentified tipsy fan who inexplicably befriended him Friday night on the practice green—followed him Saturday when he began fashioning his third-round 63. At one point in that round, he was eight-under-par after 10 holes.

Streck put together seven birdies on the first 14 holes Sunday. He drilled a six-foot birdie putt on the par-4 17th hole to go 15-under and wrest the lead from Crenshaw.

With Streck in the clubhouse with a one-stroke advantage, Crenshaw, the 1973 Texas Open champion who has been playing Oak Hills since he was a teen-ager, flubbed a 19-foot birdie putt on No. 17. He then three-putted the par-3 18th hole to fall into fourth place.

Hinkle, 29, of Santee, Calif., fired a 64 Sunday, while first-round leader Green, 31, of Birmingham, Ala., had a 66. Popular Lee Trevino, who covets the Texas Open title he has never won, was only one stroke out of first place after three rounds, but could only manage a 70 Sunday.

Dave Barr of Kelowna won $800 with a final-round score of 70 for 275.

Joan keeps title

Joan Moore won the week-long Cedar Hill Golf Club ladies championship for the second consecutive year by defeating Libby Hemmons in the finals. Isobel McGilivray's 163 earned medal honors.

Early mistake offset by eagle

ALAMO, Calif. (AP) — Donna Caponi Young lost two strokes off her lead with an early double bogey but offset that mistake with an eagle on the 12th hole Sunday and won the $100,000 women's pro golf tournament at Round Hill Country Club.

It was the first tournament victory since 1976 for Young, the 33-year-old golfer from Los Angeles who ran away from Nancy Lopez and other challengers with a strong finish in the final round over the 6,324-yard, par-73 course. She posted a 71, her fourth sub-par round for a 72-hole total of 282 and won $15,000.

Defending champion Jane Blalock closed with a 72, taking second place with a 287 total.

Dale Shaw of Victoria fired a final-round 83, finishing at the bottom of the field with a total score of 322.

Socreds go glossy

B.C.'s Social Credit government has issued a glossy full-color magazine called B.C. Economic Development, three years after accusing the New Democratic Party government of propaganda for a similar publication titled Land.

The current government is sending its 28-page magazine to businesses and professionals in the province and to investors outside B.C., a spokesman said Monday.

He said 75,000 copies have been mailed at a cost of $70,000, or just under $1 apiece.

Records show that the previous government mailed 800,000 copies of its 24-page magazine in September, 1975, to every household in the province at a cost of $150,000 or 20 cents apiece.

Canada's quiz king dies

Dickson: A long career

Canada's king of quiz, Roy Ward Dickson, died suddenly at his Oak Bay home over the weekend. He was 68.

Dickson's radio career began in the 30s in Vancouver but much of his fame was achieved through his work in Toronto and Britain.

He is reputed to have broadcast the world's first quiz show, Professor Dick and His Question Box, in May 1935 over CKCL Toronto. In the more than 30 years that followed before retiring here to his home at 2096 Avondale, he became a popular figure on radio and television in both Canada and Britain.

In Canada he achieved a wide following as host of Fun Parade and Take a Chance, one of the first shows signed by the new CTV television network. In Britain, his Abacadabra, Mr. and Mrs. Turnabout, and Think of a Word, among others, were perennial favorites in the '50s and '60s.

In all, he is believed to have devised, produced and hosted over 5,000 audience participation shows involving more than 50 series.

He was also the author of The Greatest Quiz Book Ever.

Dickson is survived by his wife Shirley Ann, one son, Vaughn of Vancouver and two daughters, Pamela and Valerie, both of Victoria.

A private family cremation service was held.

Saturday night was Ed C. Ball night at the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans club.

Two hundred members and guests rose in standing ovation as president Tommy Thomas presented Ball with one of the association's highest awards—the citation of order for service from the dominion command.

This award, given for his outstanding service to the club, was unanimously approved by the delegates from across Canada at their recent conference in Lethbridge.

Ball's chief accomplishment was carrying to completion his dream of building a low-cost apartment for senior citizens which resulted in the official opening April 9 of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans 45 unit low rental complex at 801 Darwin.

In accepting his certificate and accompanying medal Ball praised his wife Freda for her work behind the scenes and for years of attending to the many details connected with the necessary fund raising. Mrs. Ball was presented with a large floral arrangement.

Ball also gave full credit to all who helped, his fellow members, his co-workers and the women's auxiliary and emphasized that without their help he could not have completed this vital project which will be of lasting benefit to the senior citizens of the community and a source of pride for the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans of Canada.

NAMES in the NEWS

Gracie, 80, wows 'em at farewell

British music hall performer Gracie Fields, 80, was applauded when she gave a farewell performance in her British hometown of Rochdale on Saturday night. One of the most popular entertainers in the English-speaking world, Our Gracie, the Lancashire Lass, sang Sally, The Biggest Aspidochelone in the World and other favorites. Her voice was loud and clear, and she broke into a dance as she sang I Could Have Danced All Night. Gracie has lived for years on the Italian resort island of Capri with her Romanian husband Boris Alperovici. Her performance Saturday opened a Rochdale Theatre which has been named after her.

Michel Dalberto of France has won the Leeds international piano competition in Leeds, England, securing a prize of $4,000 and a gold medal. He was one of six finalists in the event, held in this northern English city every three years. In Saturday's final round, Dalberto played Mozart's Concerto in C (K 05). Second place went to Diana Kacso of Brazil, who played Tchaikovsky's No. 1 in B flat and third was Lydia Artyomiw of the United States who performed Brahms's D minor.

An album of pornographic pictures might lead police to the killer of Bob Crane, TV star of the Hogan's Heroes series. Detectives have been looking for the album since June 28, when Crane, 49, was beaten to death with a heavy metal bar. Crane apparently knew his killer and had let him into the apartment Crane was using while appearing here in a Windmill Dinner Theatre production of Beginner's Luck, police said. "Apparently there was an album missing—pornographic stills," said Police Chief Walter Nemetz. "It might be a clue." Dozens of videotapes were reported found in the apartment, showing Crane engaged in sex with women in various stages of undress.

Allan Blanchard, Washington bureau chief for the Toronto News, died Sunday from legionnaires disease, the newspaper announced. He was 48. Legionnaires disease takes its name from an outbreak in Philadelphia in 1976 during an American Legion convention during which 29 persons died.

A Soviet translator at the United Nations has defected and sought asylum in the United States, informed sources said Monday. The sources identified the defector as Imant Lesninski, 48, employed by the UN Secretariat as a translator for its conference service. No further details were immediately available.

Bennett Campbell, a 35-year-old teacher from Cardigan and a member of the legislature since 1970, was sworn in Monday as the 26th premier in the history of Prince Edward Island. Campbell, a member of the provincial cabinet since 1972, took the oath of office from Lt.-Gov. Gordon Bennett while Alex Campbell, premier since 1966, watched with members of the cabinet he had led until his resignation earlier this month.

Gloria Swanson walked onto the big sound stage of New York's Astoria Studios, where many of her great motion pictures were shot, and said being there gave her "goose pimples." The 79-year-old actress led an entourage of politicians and film industry representatives on Monday to dedicate the 58-year-old studio as a city landmark. During the 1920s, the studio was busy with films which included such stars as the Marx Brothers, Rudolph Valentino and W.C. Fields, among others. "How marvellous it is to see this place living and working in 1978," Miss Swanson said.

After being missing for 47 years, Fortunes of Nigel has returned to its place on the shelves of the public library in Salmon, Idaho. The book, written by Sir Walter Scott, was checked out in 1931 and never returned. A library aide spotted it at a rummage sale recently and returned it to the shelves.

What's good for the pancake might be good for the gas tank, researchers in Columbus, Ohio, believe. So they are trying to get farmers in the Midwest to increase their production of sweet sorghum. The crop, which is used for pancake and waffle syrup, is being studied as the base for a fuel called gasanol that could replace petroleum. Ten million acres of sweet sorghum could produce the equivalent to 1.5 million barrels of petroleum a day for a year, says Stephen Kresovich, a Battelle Columbus Laboratories agronomist.

Wallace wrong —Curtis

Canadian Press

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis has accused Barbara Wallace (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) of creating a false impression and making statements without checking the facts.

Curtis said in a letter to Mrs. Wallace that he was dismayed by her recent statement that a monthly subsidy of $642 had been withdrawn from Cowichan Valley Stage Lines.

He said this was wrong, and the government recently extended the contract with the company until May 1979, by which time he hopes arrangements will be worked out with the Urban Transport Authority for continuation of the service with local government support.

Mrs. Wallace said she had appealed directly to Premier Bennett to intervene because the firm, which provides bus service between Lake Cowichan and Duncan, has curtailed its passenger operations due to financial losses.

Reluctant jurors spark scolding

Two women who failed to show up for jury duty in county court Monday morning were summoned before Judge Leslie Cashman first thing in the afternoon for a dressing down.

When the two failed to answer their names at roll call after being issued with summonses, Cashman instructed sheriff's deputies to bring them in.

One of them said there was "no good reason" for not being there—she was simply late. But the second said, "I didn't think I'd have to come."

She said she had appeared at the first day of the current sitting and was not picked for the first jury panel, so assumed the court was finished with her.

"You weren't listening, madam," Cashman said. "That's not a very good excuse."

"There are procedures for disciplining jurors who don't appear... I have never done it and I hope it will not be necessary," he said, dismissing the pair.

Term suspended after 68 days jail

After spending 68 days in custody awaiting disposition of her case, accused Kathryn Eileen Piercy, 23, was put on probation for 18 months when sentence was suspended in Victoria county court Monday.

The woman pleaded guilty to unlawfully using a credit card knowing it to have been stolen, and appeared before Judge Leslie Cashman following a presentence report.

"You are going to have to change your way of thinking, and particularly with respect to your companions," Cashman said.

As conditions of probation, Piercy must report to a probation officer monthly, seek employment and refrain from association with anyone known to be involved with narcotics or restricted drugs.

"You've got to do something about keeping away from the bad companions you seem to have a predilection for being involved with," the judge said.

The accused used a Sweet 16 credit card stolen in the burglary of a Shelbourne Street apartment, purchasing $69.93 worth of clothing May 27, 1978.

Object role out—Maggie

MONTREAL (CP) — Margaret Trudeau, who returned to Canada on Sunday after a stay on the French Riviera where she acted in her second feature-length film, says she will never again allow herself to portray the role of a woman as an object.

Mrs. Trudeau told reporters at Montreal's Mirabel International Airport that the crew she worked with in making the film Ange Gardien on the French Riviera lent an air of professionalism to an otherwise unprofessional film.

The prime minister's estranged wife, stopping briefly here on her way to Ottawa for a reunion with her three children, said she would never do a film with the children because "it is too tough."

"I went through this experience myself, but it would not be sensible for the children," she said. "They would be exploited."

European filmmakers abuse the spectacular side of their films. They still use women as objects."

Her comments coincided with the publication by a pair of Montreal tabloids Sunday of photographs taken during the filming of Ange Gardien.

One of the photographs shows Margaret lying scantily clad on the ground, with an unidentified actor, also partially undressed, lying on top of her in an intimate embrace.

The photograph, identified as one of several published by the French magazine Paris Match in a recent two-page spread, was accompanied by the headline: "Oh, oh, Pierre won't like this."

graphs, published with the tag line "Maggie's smooching movie," showed her in a scene kissing co-star Francis Lemaire.

Mrs. Trudeau, who was unaware that reporters had been told about her arrival at the airport, at first refused to be interviewed but later relented.

She said she was tired of the media coverage of her personal life to the exclusion of her professional activities. "I am a victim of the public life," she said.

Cariboo College closed

KAMLOOPS (CP) — After most faculty members withdrew their services Monday, Cariboo College council announced a one-week closure of the college due to a labor dispute with 73 non-teaching employees.

At a meeting with students, college chairman Don Murray and acting principal Leo Perra also said that the college might remain closed until January.

During the one-week closure, college officials and representatives of Local 900, Canadian Union of Public Employees are to meet with labor ministry officials in an attempt to end the dispute, council officials said. The employees were locked out by the college Aug. 18.

The dispute centres on wages and on a re-evaluation of jobs agreed to by both sides in 1974.

CLC cuts Soviet link in dissident protest

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress has suspended indefinitely its exchange program with the Soviet All Union Central Council of Trade Unions following recent trials of dissidents and "harassment of trade unionists," CLC president Dennis McDermott said Monday.

McDermott also said in a statement that the CLC was putting pressure on the Chilean military regime by calling on CLC affiliates to "heighten their solidarity activities for the workers of Chile."

The CLC president said the congress was not joining the "camp of compulsive Soviet-haters" through its action suspending a trade unionist exchange program with the Soviet council.

"The congress is simply sticking to its principle of standing up for people's rights wherever they are violated," he said.

McDermott said the recent trial and sentencing of Anatoly Shcharansky, a Soviet dissident, was one reason for the CLC action. Shcharansky, a Jew, had been active in monitoring Soviet compliance with an international agreement on human rights reached at Helsinki in 1975.

The Soviet dissident was sentenced this summer to three years in jail and 10 years in labor camp on charges of treason and anti-Soviet agitation.

Provincial COURT

A preliminary hearing date on a charge of unlawful confinement against an Esquimalt police constable was set Monday in Victoria provincial court.

James Askew, 38, who was committed to stand trial on a charge of assault causing bodily harm against 33-year-old Ronald Shingler, 613 Drake, on Dec. 19, 1976, was also charged with the unlawful confinement of Shingler.

Judge Fred Green ordered the committal Friday on the assault charge but there was no time to hear evidence on the second count.

Feb. 21, 1979, was set as the date for the second preliminary.

Askew has elected trial by judge without jury on both charges.

A third teenager was charged Monday in a Sept. 8 incident in which an Esquimalt police constable received fractured ribs while investigating a complaint in front of 881 Ellery.

Randy Ireland, 17, of 662 Head, was charged with assault causing bodily harm to Sgt. Frank Mitchell and Constable Gordon Jenkins of the Esquimalt police and with obstructing the peace officers in their duties.

Ireland, who will be represented by lawyer David Lisson, elected trial by judge and jury and was remanded until Thursday to fix a preliminary hearing date.

Charged last Tuesday with an assault against Mitchell and obstruction, also before Judge Harold Alder, were 17-year-old Stephen Roy Khol, 1825 Fairfield, and 18-year-old Kevan Craven, 1167 Colville. Khol was also charged with assaulting Jenkins while Craven was charged additionally with escaping lawful custody.

A Victoria hotel was fined $100 by Alder for having too many patrons in its disco.

Olympic Hotel Ltd., operators of the Royal Olympic Hotel, 442 Johnson, pleaded guilty to allowing more persons on the premises of Oly's Disco than allowed under the Public Hall and Theatre Safety Regulations.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court there were 75 more than the allowable 140 people in the disco between 11:25 and 11:40 p.m., Aug. 18.

A charge of permitting people to stand and wait in the entrance passageway was withdrawn after the guilty plea to the first charge was entered.

A 38-year-old Surrey man, Darryl Wayne Brown, was charged with conspiracy to commit theft.

The charge stated that Brown and another person, on Feb. 5, 1975, tried to make it appear that the cash receipts of the Craigflower Villa Apartment Block had been taken in a robbery.

Brown was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,300 and remanded until Oct. 2 for election of trial method.

Brian John Byers, 34, of 19 Wellington, was charged with a Saturday break-in at the Lucky Turn Food Store, 1274 May.

Byers, who was released on $500 recognizance, was remanded to next Monday for election.

Fined for drinking-driving were: John Joseph Watren, 23, of the USS Rorke, $500; and Albert Barry Batsch, 20, of 645 Pine, $300.

FIRE UPGRADING BOON FOR HOTEL

A Victoria hotel ordered to upgrade its fire safety may be glad it complied.

Approximately $5,000 damage was done to the King's Hotel, 568 Yates, in a blaze reported at 10:20 p.m. Saturday which was self-extinguished.

A Victoria fire official said the upgrading probably was responsible for confining the fire to one room.

It is believed smoking in bed was the cause of the fire. No one was injured.

Evidence queried, theft suspect freed

A man accused of robbing newfound acquaintances after socializing over a couple of beers was acquitted in Victoria county court Monday.

Thomas Cornell Cheek had pleaded not guilty to theft of about $300 belonging to Carol Bone and Gordon Schaurete and being in possession of money knowing it to have been stolen. The charges arose from an incident last Oct. 31 at the complainants' home at 1473 Hillside.

Defence counsel David Lisson called no evidence and said the crown's case lacked corroborative evidence of identity and theft could not therefore be proven.

"In view of the nature of the evidence and the fact that the defence is based on alleged weakness in that evidence (in the matter of identification) I am going into more detail than I usually do," said Judge E.J.C. Stewart.

He went over evidence from the time Schaurete met a black man as he came away from a downtown liquor store after drinking beer and cashing his paycheque that afternoon. The black gave Schaurete a ride home and he was invited in for a late evening beer.

After sitting with Schaurete and Carol Bone for about 1½ hours, the visitor disappeared while the couple were out of the room briefly. A $20 bill was missing from the coffee table and a wallet containing 13 $20 bills and other denominations also was gone.

Police were given a description of the visitor and within an hour a man was arrested at a discotheque. In his wallet were 14 $20 bills.

But police asked Bone, her brother and Schaurete to make an identification at the police station after indicating their suspect was the thief. They were told to observe the accused as he was taken alone through the police foyer where they were sitting.

Lisson made the point that there was no lineup or photo comparison, and the police explanation that no suitable black men could be rounded up at that hour of the night, and that police files contain few pictures of blacks, was not acceptable.

"There is no reason or excuse why this man was not afforded the same opportunity given to white people in this community," Lisson said.

"The police procedure was entirely wrong and unfair to the accused," Stewart said, even though he noted certain distinctive features of the accused and said the complainants had plenty of opportunity to look at the visitor in their livingroom.

"There seems no doubt the complainants were given the distinct impression the accused was the thief and the money was recovered," the judge said.

The inherent hazards of identity are increased by such methods, and the court concluded there could be no conviction on such evidence.

Binge brothers draw probation

Two brothers on a binge who broke into the liquor stores of Gorge Vale golf club were placed on three years' probation when sentence was suspended Monday in Victoria county court.

Charles W. Karaim, 26, and Samuel T. Karaim, 24, pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft at the clubhouse, 1005 Craigflower, July 9, 1977, where a cash box was rifled and 34 bottles of liquor were obtained.

During the burglary a silent alarm was set off and police arrived to find the pair still inside the building. Police said $163 was taken from the box and valued the liquor at $250.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett told Judge E.J.C. Stewart the two had numerous convictions for Criminal Code and motor vehicle offences, and Samuel had been convicted for being in possession of marijuana. He suggested severe penalties.

"I don't think extensive records should necessarily be a decisive factor," Stewart said, noting both young men had support from their family that may help in their rehabilitation.

The men are required to keep the peace and report regularly to a probation officer.

WHY A HONDA CAN HELP SELL YOU ON A MAZDA.

If you were to put a Honda Civic beside a Mazda GLC Deluxe and compare both hatchbacks point by point, chances are the Civic would start to sell you on a GLC. How do we know?

Because a little while ago, a Mazda dealer did it.

He put a Honda Civic on his lot full of Mazda GLC's last summer and invited people to test-drive and compare both cars. Shortly afterwards, his full lot wasn't so full anymore.

And here are some reasons why:

First off, the GLC is bigger and roomier than a Civic. In fact, the GLC has a total of 86 cu. ft. of passenger and cargo space while the Civic has only 74 cu. ft. (Some people said the thing that bugged them about the Honda was they didn't know what to do about their left foot when driving, because the footspace was very cramped. The GLC gave plenty of leg room for both legs.)

Second, the GLC has 43% more window area than a Civic so there's better visibility all around. (People said they felt safer in the GLC because they could see more.)

Third, the GLC Deluxe offers standard features a Civic doesn't. For example, the GLC Deluxe comes with a rear window wiper and washer—standard. Civic doesn't.

The GLC Deluxe comes with split rear seats, electric hatch release, big 13" whitewall tires and a unique walk-in device in the front seat—standard. Civic doesn't. The GLC also offers a 3-speed automatic model that gives the best overall gas mileage of any automatic car today (mileages of 69 km/gal on the highway and 59 km/gal in the city*). Honda only offers a 2-speed semi-automatic.

Last but not least, the GLC gives you a choice of a 2 or 4-door hatchback. Civic doesn't. It seems after comparing both cars, a lot of people admitted the GLC came out ahead. Their biggest surprise was that the GLC wasn't as popular.

Well, consider this. Honda may be recognized as being the most popular small car in Canada. But it's not the most popular small car in the world. In fact, in countries like Norway, France, Australia and Switzerland there's another small car that completely outsells Honda Civic. The Mazda GLC.

And if that doesn't sell you on a GLC, maybe this will. The GLC Deluxe costs less than a Civic Hatchback. About $300 less.

Bigger law school

Working drawings for a proposed University of Victoria law school building can proceed, the UVic board of governors was informed by the provincial government Monday.

The proposed building would cost about $6 million, and would permit the law school to expand, law dean Murray Fraser said. The law school is currently housed in cramped quarters in the McPherson Library on campus, and is limited to 70 new students a year because of space limitations. In the new building, it could expand to take 100 new students each year.

The working drawings should be completed this winter, administration dean Trevor Matthews said. If the university receives government approval to go to tender immediately, the building could be ready for classes in the fall of 1980.

Tides beat smells

What does a proud community like Oak Bay do when it finds itself with something as out of character as a bad smell?

It wiles it away. And that's all there is to it.

That was the case with the foul seaweed of Willows Beach.

A complaint from a resident prompted a suggestion during a council committee meeting that a sniff patrol (someone with a nose for such things) check the situation out. The smelly offender could be trucked from behind the Tweed Curtain to some place more appropriate for offending odors.

Ald. Peter Bunn provided the positive thinking. He had this feeling that if council just left it for 30 days it would get up and go away on its own.

When the committee met again Monday night his mind-over-matter theory was proven right.

A brief report from municipal engineer Geoffrey White disclosed that "weather and tides have taken care of the situation."

An elated Bunn noted that his confidence had saved Oak Bay $400.

So you were wondering whatever became of the Jack of beanstalk fame? Well, he grew up, and to avoid reprisal from friends of the fallen giant, changed his name to Phil Moran. Then he moved to 860 Lampson where he started all over again with another beanstalk—this time a 20-foot beauty that gives him a little shade and hides him from any giants who might wander by. You might call this a tall story. Phil calls it a tall runner beanstalk.

Zero: New budget start?

Zero-based budgeting will get a good look from the Saanich school board, the board decided Monday.

The board voted to have its administration develop several alternative proposals for using the system in at least sections of its budget, after listening to two school trustees and the board's secretary-treasurer, who had recently attended a seminar in Vancouver led by Peter Phyrre, the best-known advocate of zero-based budgeting.

The system basically requires all expenditures to be justified each year, rather than simply adding or subtracting increments from the budget without asking whether the item or program is necessary.

With zero-based budgeting, all possible expenditures are ranked, in order of their priority, after being examined and justified as necessary. The amount of money available then determines the level of services which is provided, and the point at which programs deemed less important are cut off.

While praising the system for its logic and common sense, trustee Walter Tangye had doubts that it could be applied to a school district.

For one thing, it is extremely difficult to clearly define the costs of many school programs. For another, zero-based budgeting transfers spending control to the final authority, in this case the school board, and "I can't see some of our people falling gracefully into line on that," Tangye said.

Finally, the program requires "fixed, clear objectives."

"We haven't got any," he said bluntly.

"We are really so set in our ways, our system is so firmly established, that I don't see it happening, although I would like it too."

More optimistic about the system was trustee Gerry Kristianson, who said the district should "take a stab at subjecting portions of our budget to that kind of analysis."

While the school district staff might not welcome the extra work involved, some programs such as industrial education are relatively easier to cost, and would lend themselves to zero-based budgeting, Kristianson said.

One advantage of the system is that programs and services are ranked in order of importance before dollar figures are applied to them, an important consideration for school boards which must make up their provisional budgets before they know how much money the B.C. education finance formula will give them, since the basic figures in the formula are not announced until Dec. 1 each year.

The system is also an excellent way to improve haphazard staffing and budgeting procedures, Kristianson said.

School board secretary-treasurer Ross Ingram indicated that he was not averse to the exercise.

"I'm fairly optimistic about it. It gives us flexibility in adding new programs, which we don't have now."

It also places the onus for decision-making more squarely on the shoulders of trustees, who in the past simply directed the administration to cut money from the budget, without always having to decide where the cuts would be made, he said.

$6.9-million terminal expansion Pat Bay may become international again

By BILL SMITH
Colonist reporter

A $6.9-million expansion of the Pat Bay airport terminal is on the drawing boards.

The proposal calls for a tripling of the present 14,444-square-foot terminal building, Donald McArthur, acting supervisor of the transport ministry's airports branch, said in an interview from Vancouver Monday.

The planned expansion, almost ready to go to the concept design stage, will also mean international traffic will be able to use the airport because customs facilities will be upgraded.

"This will mean Canadian Customs will be asked to lift restrictions in force governing international traffic into the airport."

The restrictions on trans-ocean flights were imposed because of a lack of space in the existing terminal building, he said.

The expansion is based on passenger movement forecasts to 1990. MoT predicts the 500,000 passengers now using the airport annually will at least double in the next 12 years.

McArthur said so far there has been no indication the project will be affected by the recently-announced federal government austerity program.

"A few snags remain to be worked out," he said, "all being well we should be able to make a budget application very soon."

The project could be completed by 1981, providing there were no hitches, he said.

A master plan for the expansion was recently completed by transport officials after discussions with the Capital Region Board, representatives of the province and municipal officials.

The plan determined a need for a major expansion of the terminal building but ruled out any runway expansion.

Studies done in conjunction with the plan plotted passenger routes and the time it took for them to be processed through the various procedures at the airport.

The study revealed a need to upgrade customs facilities as well as other service areas in the building.

McArthur said no decision had yet been made on whether the expansion would be in the form of a new building or if a second storey would be added to the terminal.

"But I would hate to see a practically new building torn down, that would be both foolish and costly."

However, if it was decided to build a new structure, the existing terminal building would be ideal for an air operations centre, he said.

The present terminal, built in 1964, handles about 14 domestic flights a day.

The airport has enjoyed a fairly steady growth pattern. For example in 1964, 100,000 passengers used the facility. Four years later this had jumped to 200,000. In 1972 the number of passenger movements was just under 300,000.

Incident at restaurant keeps police hopping

Saanich police had their hands full late Monday night with an ambulance accident and an apparent drug overdose at the McDonald's restaurant on Saanich Road.

The ambulance, with lights and sirens going, was turning onto Saanich Road from Douglas Street en route to the McDonald's about 11 p.m. when it collided with a car travelling in the same direction. The driver of the car received head wounds in the accident and was treated by the ambulance attendants.

The ambulance was damaged on the right front fender, while the car's left rear fender was caved in.

Meanwhile, another ambulance was called out to the restaurant.

An eyewitness said a youth was pulled from the back of a truck parked at McDonald's and placed in the ambulance, the apparent victim of a drug overdose. The truck was later towed away.

The eyewitness also said a girl in the truck was taken away by police. No details were being released by police at press time.

'Some can't read a financial statement'

Ed Lum hints comeback

A watchful Ed Lum is poised for a political comeback.

The former Saanich Mayor gave a strong hint of his intention to seek an aldermanic seat in this year's municipal election in an interview Monday.

Lum, an interested spectator at last Thursday's public hearing on the Interurban industrial zone proposal, said he is eyeing a return to the political arena but may not make a definite decision until the ninth hour—"the 11th hour would be leaving it too late."

Lum, deposed by Couveller in a three-way mayoral race last November, believes the Royal Oak industrial park proposal rejected by council earlier this year will be a major campaign issue in the upcoming election, depending on who the candidates are.

"Whether or not it's an issue in the campaign, I'm willing to bet my bottom dollar the Royal Oak proposal will be a reality within two years."

He said he does not agree with those Saanich aldermen who feel a referendum on industrial development should be held in November.

"Elected people are there to make decisions they feel are in the best interests of the whole municipality, regardless how unpopular they might be."

Lum said he shared the opinion of many residents that the present council is being dictated to by ratepayer groups.

There should also be more businessmen on council, he said, adding: "We need people who have been in business because some of the people there can't even read a financial statement."

He said since taking office, Couveller had done nothing to move the municipality ahead, and had displayed no leadership.

Morale among municipal staff was at rock bottom, he said, blaming this on a failure by council to provide leadership and direction.

The problems facing council were a direct result of a lack of leadership and business experience, the former mayor said.

He chastized council for considering industrial development at Interurban because of the high costs of services and road upgrading.

"A previous council looked at the property and ruled it out because of these factors and because the land was outside the urban containment boundary," he said.

Land issue alive—mayor

Saanich Mayor Mel Couveller said Monday he expects someone will reintroduce the Royal Oak industrial zone proposal this year or early in 1979.

The proposal to rezone 128 acres at Glanford and Vanalman was defeated by council in March when Couveller broke a 4-4 council deadlock and voted against the rezoning.

"I am satisfied the issue is going to come before council again," he said Monday.

In preparation for this move, Couveller said he is toying with the idea of having an impact assessment study done by staff, similar to the one prepared for the Interurban scheme, a project overwhelmingly defeated by council last week.

Couveller, however, is confident the Royal Oak proposal will again be defeated the second time around.

Defeat of both the industrial schemes would mean there would be no major industrial development in the municipality, thereby eliminating efforts to broaden the tax base, he said, warning this would mean revenue would not be available to extend services.

Expressing disappointment at the 8-1 defeat of the Interurban proposal, Couveller said he had received many calls since the hearing from residents who were astounded and appalled council had rejected a municipal land banking scheme that was going to generate tax dollars.

Will Curtis offer gift at municipalities meeting?

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is scheduled to speak to the Union of B.C. Municipalities' annual convention in Penticton next week, and Victoria Ald. Robert Wright wants the minister to bring a present.

Wright says Curtis could do a lot for Victoria and other urban municipalities by extending the deadline for abolishing the land-use contract for at least another year. (See also Page 13).

And the UBCM convention, Wright says, would be an excellent platform from which to announce the extension.

The land-use contracts, a zoning tool by which municipalities and regional boards can negotiate special concessions with developers, is to be legislated out of existence Nov. 19.

The basic advantage of a land-use contract is that municipalities could grant a developer certain concessions not allowed under existing zoning without rezoning the property involved.

When a number of municipalities and regional boards abused the system by setting high impost fees and by declaring virtually everything within their boundaries development areas, making every development subject to land-use contract, Curtis lowered the boom, abolishing land-use contracts.

A new zoning tool, the special development permit, is to take its place. For about a year, both the land-use contract and the development permit have existed side by side, but on Nov. 19, the land-use contract is to be discontinued.

Wright said the development permit system had a number of basic flaws. It regulated location and esthetics of a development, but not density and land-use.

"And in certain sensitive areas of the city, we should be able to negotiate with developers for certain concessions, and the only way to do it has been by land-use contract, which compelled the developer by law to carry out his promises," he said.

The abolition of the land-use contract, Wright said, would also be detrimental to the city's heritage program for residential homes.

The heritage bylaw permits a higher zoning use of residential heritage homes as an incentive for preservation. The owner could build just about anything on that property," Wright said. "Regular zoning categories are too inflexible. They are black and white and don't allow for special considerations," he said.

the restrictions inherent in heritage designation.

That has been handled by way of land-use contract to keep the residential zoning intact.

And why doesn't city council want to rezone a heritage home to permit selective commercial uses?

"What if the home burns down? With the property zoned commercial, the owner could build just about anything on that property," Wright said.

"Regular zoning categories are too inflexible. They are black and white and don't allow for special considerations," he said.

Wright believes the minister could accomplish both, retention of the land-use contract and an end to abuses.

"We need a simplified version of the land-use contract, something that regulates density and land use alone. It could be designed to apply to a specific properties or projects," Wright said.

"Together with the development permit system, such a simplified version of the land-use contract could be an effective tool for municipalities," he added.

Wright said he hoped the minister would announce something to that effect in Penticton Wednesday.

Becher Bay anglers win with two biggest salmon

The two biggest fish in the Saanich Rotary derby at the weekend were weighed in at Becher Bay's Pacific Lions Marina.

Maurice Tieulle, 542 Harbinger, caught a 47-pounder off Beechey Head, heaviest fish ever weighed into the nine-year-old Rotary derby. He won a deluxe stereo system.

Second prize went to Gary Dawson, 2765 Rosebank, for a 40-pound chinook taken off Aldridge Point on anchovy. He won a portable color TV. Top woman angler was Billie Hunter who caught a 21½-pounder to win the Woodward's-Mayfair trophy. She also won seventh prize on the over-all derby.

Ten-year-old Mike Connor won the Eaton's trophy and prize for junior anglers with a 10½-pounder.

Dr. W.H. Lewis, 3978 Lexington, won the big draw prize for a 1978 hardtop car.

Winner of the two-week Mazatlan holiday for two, plus $300, as a draw prize among anglers who entered fish, was Stephen Lawrence.

Clean up hockey-Gardom

Minister scores game fights by amateurs, professionals

Attorney-General Garde Gardom told amateur and professional hockey league operators Monday to clean up their act or face the consequences.

The statement was made in a letter to Ernie McLean, chairman of the B.C. Junior Hockey league, with copies sent to other amateur leagues and the National Hockey League.

Gardom made the letter public Monday although it was written last May. He said he had held the contents in confidence in the hope of receiving a reply but as no answer had been forthcoming he had decided to make his warning public.

Gardom told McLean he did not think there was any place "for either fighting or for intimidation" in hockey "and certainly not for the counselling of either."

"The National Football League in the United States, the National Basketball Association, have indicated very clearly what their attitude is to fighting—suspensions and large fines. I would assume that similar attitudes and sanctions exist in soccer and rugby. Also, and I stand to be corrected, the general rule in all of these sports is that if the person fights, he's out of the game."

"What's wrong with that?"

"I don't want to see Canada's national game have to be under the wing of the criminal justice system. I don't think any Canadian wishes that. But surely to goodness one does not have to put the question: Is there not a need for hockey either to clean up its own act or face the consequences which, in my view, are unnecessary, unneeded and unrequited if some common sense could be shown."

"Throw people who fight off the ice. Throw people who counsel fighting and intimidation off the team, and establish monetary sanctions within the system to take care of both of these aspects as well."

Gardom said he had been advised by some people that hockey was reluctant to curb fighting because it might affect the gate.

"This citizen does not agree with that," he wrote to McLean. "Any good athlete and any person who appreciates a good athlete is more interested in skill and artistry than what is now euphemistically known as 'good tactics'."

"Hockey can do it. I think hockey should do it."

Earlier in his letter Gar-dom told McLean that he regretted the "apparent necessity of having to make the remarks I shall now do."

He also stated that "it is an extremely regrettable situation that anyone in the criminal justice system has to be called upon to consider what ever may be necessary action to appropriately shepherd an activity that is regarded as being a sport."

Gardom was out of the city Monday and unavailable for further comment but indicated that he felt his letter to McLean self-explanatory.

"Be it sport for pay or sport for fun, conceivably those who play must do so because they like it and those who watch it must do so for the same reason. In neither case in my view is it necessary for that to become a process of gladiation for the gratification of either the spectator or the player."

While McLean still hasn't replied, Robert Mullock, president of the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association has, in a letter dated Sept. 11, Mullock said the BCAHA "is as dedicated to eliminating as much as possible, violence from hockey in B.C. as you are."

Mullock added that heavy suspensions were handed out last season and that emphasis to reduce violence in hockey would continue.

He said it would help considerably if the attorney general could support a proposal to provide four to six players who are attending academic or training school bursaries for good sportsmanship.

Rules tightened for ice behavior

Canadian Press

The Vancouver-based Pacific Junior Hockey League is attempting to crack down on violence with the application of a new fighting rule this coming season.

Any player involved in a fight will be ejected from the game.

The new rule will not be restricted to aggressors in a fight, but will include both combatants.

The BCJHL recently cracked down on coaches of Nanaimo Clippers and Penticton Vees, the teams involved in a serious incident during the playoffs at Nanaimo.

Vees pulled out of the series and Nanaimo was awarded the championship.

Coach Terry Martin of Penticton was suspended for 30 games and coach Larry McNabb of Nanaimo was suspended for 15 games.

The BCJHL also adopted rules intended to cut down on fighting.

Green Vegetable Sea Salad: Colorful, low in fat

Cod perks up tasty salad entree

Here is a one-dish entree you toss together from left-over vegetables and salad fixings which has lots of appeal! Colorful, light, low in fat and protein rich too. Green Vegetable Sea Salad features cod from the icy waters of the North Atlantic. A 1-pound package of fish is cut in cubes and poached — while still frozen — in chicken broth with ginger and a dash of vinegar for bite. Poaching liquid becomes salad sauce with the addition of cornstarch and oil.

GREEN VEGETABLE SEA SALAD
1 pound frozen cod

fillets
1/2 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup vinegar
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground pepper
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon water
1/4 cup oil
1 cup peas, cooked

1 cup cut green beans, cooked
1/3 cup sliced green onions
1/3 cup sliced radishes
1/4 cup mayonnaise
Let fish stand, unwrapped, at room temperature 15 to 20 minutes. Cut fish into 1 inch cubes. In medium skillet, combine chicken broth, vinegar, ginger, salt and pepper. Place fish in skillet. Cover and simmer about 10 to 15 minutes or until fish is opaque. Remove fish. Dissolve cornstarch in water; add to mixture. Stir until thickened. Add oil. In large bowl, mix peas, beans, radishes, green onions, and place fish on top of vegetables. Pour sauce over all. Chill completely in refrigerator, at least 2 hours. Stir in mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce leaf. Garnish with sliced hard cooked eggs, if desired. Serves 4.

landers

Dear Ann Landers: I hate to admit it, but I'm ashamed of my mother. She gets ready for bed right after supper, takes her teeth out, and walks around barefoot. Her favorite outfit is my father's ratty old bathrobe. If she feels like rolling up her hair in rags or putting a mudpack on her face, she does it.

I've asked mom a dozen times if she'd mind looking presentable when I have friends over. Her answer is, "I don't have to put on the dog for your fancy friends."

Nobody else's mother goes around like that when company comes over. Am I unreasonable? — Bothered

Dear B: Too bad your mom considers keeping her teeth in her head and wearing shoes "putting on the dog." But she's your mother — no matter what — and you shouldn't apologize for her.

Dear Ann Landers: Please come to the aid of a denture wearer. When I am eating out in public I would like very much to be able to clean my teeth after the meal. Unfortunately there are few private bathrooms and this creates a problem. I just can't bring myself to take my teeth out at a long row of sinks and wash them. I'm sure this would be most unappetizing to the people around me, and I would be embarrassed.

How do other people handle this problem? — Uppers From Chicago

Dear Uppers: I am trying to come up with a plausible solution — and it's not easy. I do know there are pocket toothbrushes around that fold and take up very little space. If you could carry a paper cup along, fill it with water, and go into a private stall, you could clean your teeth unobserved and solve the problem.

I realize this sounds a bit messy, but I believe it's better than the alternative.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a blood test and my doctor said I was a little anemic. Can you tell me what foods a person can eat when they are anemic? — Mrs. B.C.

It isn't that simple. The cause of the anemia (lack of sufficient red blood cells or iron) must be pinpointed. If it is an iron-deficiency anemia, then obviously foods rich in iron would be helpful; if of folic acid, the foods rich in that or supplements help. It's important to know if the anemia is caused by inadequate diet or by bleeding (as with women who may have heavy menstrual flow) or because of an error in the way the body utilizes the important blood-forming substances in the diet. Sometimes a woman may appear from tests to be a "little anemic" just after her period, and be normal the rest of the month.

So it's up to you to ask your doctor how serious he considers the test findings and what he recommends in your case.

Safety talks 'amicable'

CP Hotels, fire officials discuss Empress

Victoria fire and building inspectors met with CP Hotels officials Monday to discuss the fire safety upgrading required at the Empress.

Inspector Ray Best of the Victoria fire department, who tackled up notices in the lobby of the world-famous hotel Friday morning; Ron Walker, the city's chief building inspector; Ed Steele, CP Hotels' senior engineer, who flew from Toronto over the weekend; and Ted Balderson, manager of the Empress, met for more than two hours. Fire Chief Eric Simmons, who signed the fire inspection notices which were posted, said the meeting was described as "amicable" but that no decision was reached.

The orange-colored notices, posted following a 60-day waiting period after the hotel's management was notified of the deficiencies, listed an obsolete fire alarm system, lack of heat detectors in hallways, lack of fire doors in stairwells and corridors, panel-type doors to 425 rooms which must be replaced by solid-core doors, and insufficient exits as the main causes for the action.

Simmons said the two sides went into considerable detail over what was required. Balderson complained Friday that the report referred only to generalities and not specifics.

Simmons said specifics were laid down in early July when Balderson and the hotel's superintendent of building and grounds were notified of the deficiencies.

The hotel representatives were also advised of the appeal procedure in which they had 60 days from the first day of "placarding" in which to file notice of appeal with the fire prevention committee of city council.

If no appeal is filed and no action taken to correct the problems, Simmons is required to go before city council to outline what further action could be taken.

Best made his inspection of the hotel June 28 and 29 and the written report was presented a few days after that.

Balderson was unavailable for comment following the meeting, which began at 10:30 a.m. and went well into the noon hour.

Steele declined Monday night to comment, and said any statement on the hotel's behalf should come from Balderson.

Creagh acquitted on murder count

NANAIMO—Peter Douglas Creagh, 22, of Montreal, was found not guilty of second-degree murder in B.C. Supreme Court here Thursday.

As the verdict was given, he slumped forward in the prisoner's box in an obvious state of emotional release.

Creagh then managed to steady himself and jumped from the box to embrace defence attorney Dermot Owen-Flood of Victoria.

Creagh's mother, from Montreal, was crying softly as the supreme court jury of two women and 10 men delivered the verdict.

Creagh was charged with second-degree murder by Port Alberni RCMP on April 25, after 19-year-old Terrence Tobin died as a result of a fight with Creagh, in the early morning hours of April 21 outside Jack's Disco in Port Alberni.

Tobin was later taken to Victoria's Royal Jubilee Hospital, where he died April 23.

Probable cause of death was given as brain hemorrhage.

Creagh's mother, from Montreal, was crying softly as the supreme court jury of two women and 10 men delivered the verdict.

Camsell tow under way

The disabled Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Camsell, holed by Arctic ice 10 days ago, is expected to arrive at Tuktoyaktuk Wednesday afternoon on the first leg of her 26-day return trip to Esquimalt, a coast guard spokesman said Monday.

The tug Broderick started towing the vessel early Saturday after welders had made temporary repairs to two gashes in the port side. On Monday the tow line was transferred to a chartered tug, Supplier 3 from Canmar, a subsidiary of Dome Petroleum which is drilling for oil in the Beaufort Sea.

The icebreaker John A. Macdonald, also on charter to Dome, is escorting Camsell on the first leg of the journey.

The Seaspan tug Sovereign has been chartered by the coast guard to pick up the tow at Tuktoyaktuk and bring the vessel the remainder of the 8,000-kilometre trip from the Northwest Territories.

Spokesman Stephen Rybak said a full report on the extent of damage would be available on the return later this week to Victoria of marine surveyor Alec Greig and regional engineering superintendent Donald McIntyre, who went to the scene to supervise repairs.

The incident occurred about 195 kilometres east of Cambridge Bay, off the southern end of Victoria Island.

Rybak said it would be some time before repair costs could be given as tenders would first have to be called.

Canada joins fusion hunt with $400,000

OTTAWA (CP) - Imagine an limitless energy supply, relatively harmless to the environment in its creation and leaving behind no byproducts which can be converted into dangerous weapons.

Scientists from around the world have been working for years on such a project known as controlled thermonuclear fusion, the base process that feeds the sun's fires and gives the hydrogen bomb its awesome power.

And until now, Canada was the only major industrialized country without a national fusion program.

The federal government has asked the National Research Council to establish a fusion program, council president W.G. Schneider said in a recent interview.

With a modest budget of $400,000 for this year, Schneider said the money really isn't enough to begin a national program and instead calls it a scientific awareness project.

But the money and scientific achievements here thus far will at least allow this country to participate in international fusion activities where millions of dollars are spent annually by other countries. The United States is spending $400 million on nuclear fusion this year.

"The opportunities for international participation are excellent and I think in this way Canada can participate in this and share some of the benefits and be, if it develops, in a position to experiment when it develops."

Nuclear fusion is obtained by fusing two light nuclei such as deuterium and tritium, making a single heavier nucleus. Deuterium, found in sea water, holds the promise of an inexhaustible supply of energy.

While nuclei are easily split, a process known as nuclear fission, they are not easily fused. Getting them to join requires enough energy for them to overcome a natural repulsion and smash together.

The conditions permitting fusion in the sun, including temperatures of more than 100 million degrees Celsius, can be reproduced in a laboratory. Scientists agree the costs are staggering.

"This is why, of course, if we're going to play in this area that we have to put up at least the minimum resources," Schneider said.

Energy message gloomy

BANFF (CP) - Federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Monday that he has some doubts whether North Americans believe there will be an energy problem in the future or that they want to do anything about it.

Gillespie told the opening session of the World Energy Conference that the conference and such bodies as the International Energy Agency must help governments to help the public understand the complex energy situation.

He said the agency has projected a worldwide dependence on imported oil of about 29-million barrels a day by 1985—a projection based on energy supply and demand statistics submitted by individual member countries. The agency's standing group on long-term co-operation says imports could run from 31-million to 35-million barrels a day in the absence of strengthened energy policies.

"I am profoundly concerned with what can only be considered a failure of will—a failure which increases the already vulnerable economies of the industrialized world," Gillespie told the 250 delegates.

Police grab liquor

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) - A weekend rock concert which attracted about 1,500 people about 60 kilometres west of here turned out to be a sobering affair as RCMP seized about $3,500 worth of liquor at roadblocks set up near the concert gates.

Police at one roadblock also arrested a man believed to have escaped from Agassiz Mountain prison.

Several charges of possession of alcohol by minors, impaired driving and possession of drugs were also laid as a result of seizures made at the roadblocks on both roads leading to the concert at Lakeside Resort on Cluculz Lake.

Resort owner Eli Iankow said he had hundreds of complaints about the roadblocks and feels police overstepped their authority in making the seizures.

"People come here every weekend of the summer and consume alcohol in the cabins," he said. "Many of the people who had liquor seized have cabins or tents here."

The liquor was seized under a section of the provincial liquor act which permits police to make seizures if they feel the liquor is to be consumed illegally.

Nova Scotia: The voters speak today

HALIFAX (CP) - A Nova Scotia provincial election campaign seemingly saturated with issues but which failed to inspire the electorate ended Monday with the three party leaders close to home in preparation for voting today.

Much of the public apathy during five weeks of campaigning was attributed to Premier Gerald Regan's election timing which included the final weeks of the prime August vacation period and the early September return to jobs and studies.

The issues of near-record unemployment, high electric power rates and inflation dominated the campaign but did not appear to attract the attention nor create the public debate that many had anticipated.

This suited the Liberals who campaigned on their eight-year record, promised increased assistance to the primary industries and blamed economic adversities on other governments.

They took some heat off the power-rate issue even before the campaign by promising subsidies to all classes of customers over three years to offset increases of 16 to 18 per cent. Coal-fired generation is expected to help stabilize rates in the early 1980s.

The Conservatives borrowed from last year's successful Manitoba campaign of Conservative Premier Sterling Lyon and that of Prince Edward Island Conservative leader J. Angus MacLean who almost toppled the Liberals this spring by hammering big government and wasteful spending.

The New Democrats, like the Conservatives, campaigned on a promise of new priorities for spending and greater assistance for small business. The latter promise was a priority in all three election platforms.

Pundits detected a strong anti-government sentiment throughout the campaign but there was little indication whether this would manifest itself in votes for the Conservatives or New Democrats.

Voting at the end of last week in advance polls was described as light to moderate.

The Liberals, seeking their third consecutive victory since 1970, held 30 of the 46 seats in the last legislature while the Conservatives had 12, the NDP three and there was one vacancy.

Six seats were added in redistribution in June, four in the Halifax metropolitan area, a Liberal stronghold in the 1970 and 1974 elections, and one each in Colchester and Cape Breton counties.

If Regan's government is re-elected to its third term he will continue a 100-year Nova Scotia tradition that no elected premier has ever been defeated at the polls. Premiers who have been defeated since 1878 were appointed to the leadership, as was the case in recent years with Liberal premier Henry Hicks and Conservative G.I. Smith.

Maclean's Bear Island to be filmed in Stewart

Alistair Maclean's book Bear Island is to be shot as a movie at Stewart in northern B.C. this winter.

Travel Minister Grace McCarthy said the shooting schedule would result in around $1.6 million being poured into Stewart during the six-week filming period.

Peter Snell Productions of England is producer of the $7 million movie.

Actual setting of the Maclean novel is in Norway. Stewart was selected for its geographic similarity to the Norwegian area.

The provincial government has promised to invest $75,000 to keep 51 kilometres of road open between Stewart and the Granduc mine site where much of the film is expected to be shot.

It is estimated that of the $7 million budget, more than $3.5 million will be spent in B.C. Much of the balance would be spent in Glacier Bay, Alaska.

In addition to the movie and the road project Stewart has also been selected for a $320,000 grant to pave the district's airport runway, taxiway and parking apron.

The community of Stewart was hard hit several months ago when the Granduc Mines closed down.

Movie cameramen rescued from boat

Two men, out surveying the Constance Bank area, off Dallas Road, for stock movie footage, escaped when their 20-foot speedboat exploded and burned to the waterline Sunday morning.

Vernon McBeth, 1177 Highrock, and Allan Hook, 1285 Rockcrest, were rescued about 13 kilometres from Victoria. Three vessels, including the Washington State Ferries' MV Coho, came to the rescue.

McBeth, the boat's owner, said he heard an explosion before the fire. He suffered minor leg injuries in the mishap.

Hook, a well-known marine photographer, also said he heard a muffled explosion before the fire. Hook was surveying the area near the Victoria waterfront for some stock footage when the accident occurred.

'None of your business'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has told the premiers they have no business objecting to federal constitutional proposals affecting the Senate and the queen.

The premiers' demand they must agree to any changes to these two institutions is a "direct and sweeping" intrusion into federal jurisdiction, Trudeau says in a letter to Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, who chaired a premiers' conference last month in Regina.

Trudeau's letter, which is dated Sept. 13 and was made public Monday, re-affirms the federal government view-point that Parliament can act unilaterally when changing the constitution as it affects the Senate and the monarch.

The premiers disagree and following their Regina meeting issued a communique:

"The premiers firmly believe that significant constitutional reform should have the concurrence of all governments, recognizing the equality of status of all provinces in the process."

Trudeau replies by saying the provinces are quick to complain when they believe the federal government intrudes into their affairs.

"However, if there have been federal intrusions into areas of provincial jurisdiction, there has been none, I think, that is as direct and as sweeping as the provincial intrusion into federal jurisdiction that appears to be involved in the second Regina communique."

Petch lauds finance talks

A meeting Monday between University of Victoria officials and the Universities Council of B.C. was "quite productive," UVic president Dr. Howard Petch said Monday.

The annual meeting follows submission of the university budget to the UCBC in August, and precedes UCBC's submission to the provincial government in October of a request for operating funds. Aside from a discussion of the university's operating requirements, the UCBC indicated that this fall it might try to improve its formula for dividing up the funds it receives from the provincial government among the province's three universities, Petch said.

The provincial government gives the UCBC a lump sum which it distributes to the universities, and UVic officials protested last spring that the distribution system did not take all the necessary factors into account.

Servants put pickets on alert

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

The trenches are being dug today for a major battle between the provincial government and its unionized employees.

It isn't expected for several months, but B.C. Government Employees' Union general secretary John Fryer says the situation is serious enough to warrant advance warning for the public.

"Actually, we are trying to alert our members and the general public that we are going to be in for a tough set of negotiations," Fryer said in an interview Monday.

"Where the members are concerned, we want them to know they may be called on to walk the picket line this time. And for the public's sake, we think it's only fair to let it be known that there might be some inconvenience. It's better than waiting until the last minute and shocking everyone."

Job action wouldn't likely occur before August.

Normally, such comments might be written off as the first volley in the propaganda war that so often precedes major negotiations. But Fryer is basing his case this time on:

● The hard line that is being taken today against public sector employees everywhere;

● Solid indications that the B.C. government plans to "put its employees in their place";

● His expectation that the new "negative" bargaining approach will almost certainly be used by the government;

● The realization that the BCGEU was "within about eight hours of a strike" when settlement was reached on the last contract.

PLQ, Syrians scream for blood

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Carter appealed to moderates in the Arab world Monday night to aid Egypt and Israel in the hazardous task of turning the Camp David "framework for peace" into "one of the bright moments in human history."

Carter told a nationally televised joint session of Congress he would send Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to the Mideast today in a bid to get Jordan and Saudi Arabia to help turn "the promise of this moment" into reality.

Carter, who introduced Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to the cheering lawmakers, said he had asked other Arab leaders "to help sustain progress toward a comprehensive peace."

The two-time enemies, sitting with first lady Rosalynn Carter in the House VIP gallery, applauded each other when Carter mentioned their names.

In the first apparent sign of serious Egyptian domestic opposition, Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel resigned in disagreement over Sadat's handling of the Camp David talks.

But the people of Israel and Egypt—divided by suspicion, fear and hostility since the birth of the Jewish state in 1948—greeted the outcome of the Camp David summit with tears, jubilation and sheer joy.

"Look, peace has come!" an emotional Jerusalem taxi driver shouted at the top of his lungs when he heard the news as he left for work along the twisting, cobblestoned streets of the holy city.

Carter also said that nations should "join in an effort to bring to an end the conflict and terrible suffering in Lebanon," but he offered no new initiatives in that direction.

"We need to consult closely with the Arab leaders, and I am pleased to say that King Hussein of Jordan and King Khalid of Saudi Arabia have now agreed to receive Secretary Vance," he said.

Carter said the secretary of state would try "to secure their support for the realization of the new hopes and dreams of the people of the Middle East."

"Today we are privileged to see the chance for one of the bright moments in human history—a chance that may open the way to peace," the president said.

He received a loud round of applause from Congress when he said the leaders of Israel and Egypt had challenged each other to speed up conclusion of a peace treaty in "a wonderful Christmas present for the world."

The president said the success of the 13-day summit exceeded his expectations, but he cautioned that the talks "left many difficult issues still to be resolved."

Carter spoke to Hussein by telephone to Amman after cutting short a Mediterranean vacation. A U.S. official said Hussein declined to comment on the plan, saying he wanted time to study it.

Carter, Begin and Sadat announced the two-part framework for peace Sunday night with a televised show of hugs, smiles and laughs that obscured five major dangers:

● The first part, providing five years of limited self-rule on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, will fall apart unless Jordan and the Pales-

Aftershocks rock Iran Burial teams can't keep up with bodies

TABAS, Iran (AP)—Aftershocks rolled Monday across the parched countryside of northeastern Iran where at least 15,000 persons were believed killed in a giant quake that demolished 40 towns and villages and badly damaged 60 others.

In this oasis city, at the quake's epicentre, the dead were strewn out under the palm trees, their bodies frozen in grotesque postures of sudden death and wrapped in white sheets or colorful hand-woven cloth.

Gravediggers bit into the coarse, hard earth, scraping out shallow graves. They could not keep up with the steady procession of bodies brought by truck and car, and the dead lay in the sun as a Moslem clergyman prayed over them.

The town's minarets, mosques and mud-brick houses crumbled under the force of the Saturday evening tremors, giving this ancient city about 640 kilometres southeast of the capital of Tehran the appearance of a flattened sand castle. Only a few buildings escaped major damage.

The quake, Iran's worst this year, killed an estimated three-quarters of Tabas' 13,000 residents. Most of the survivors were seriously injured and the most severely hurt were flown to Tehran for treatment.

Officials feared the death toll from the quake, 7.7 on the Richter scale, would go past the 15,000 mark as reports were received from remote villages surrounding Tabas, where thousands were believed buried in the rubble.

The Iranian army sent 700 soldiers, four medical teams and numerous rescue workers to help house about 1,000

survivors in tents along Tabas' dirt airport runway.

Meanwhile, new tremors were felt Monday. They lasted only a few moments, but residents feared a second major quake.

An earthquake registering 6.5 on the Richter scale rocked the same area on Aug. 31, 1968. Tabas suffered some damage and 12,000 people in the area were killed.

Davis fined $1,000, probation ordered

VANCOUVER (CP)—Former transport minister Jack Davis, 62, was fined $1,000 and placed on probation for two months Monday in county court for defrauding the provincial government of $1,074 by misrepresenting his travel expenses.

The sentence came after character witnesses appeared for the former federal Liberal cabinet minister and he announced his resignation as a member of Premier Bennett's Social Credit government.

The premier said from Kelowna that it was "difficult to accept the reality of a colleague's announced resignation under such difficult circumstances. Those of us who are in public life realize how difficult it can be and we accept that."

"However, no one can be unfeeling about the unfortunate circumstances surrounding Mr. Davis' case. As premier, I regret that it has happened and I have the greatest sympathy for both my former colleague and his family."

"Mr. Davis has given long service to this province and this country as a public servant and as a private citizen and I feel that it would be entirely appropriate for me to thank him publicly for that service at this time."

Bennett gave no indication of a by-election date.

Sherman Hood, lawyer for Davis, had asked for a conditional discharge after telling Judge J. J. Anderson that Davis submitted his letter of resignation to Harvey

Hurricane Greta slams Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA (AP)—Hurricane Greta swept past Honduras' north coast late Monday, its torrential rains and 200-kilometre-an-hour winds destroying hundreds of homes as it headed for landfall on the small British colony of Belize.

"We have no reports of deaths or injuries as yet, but many homes have been destroyed," said Herman Allan Padgett, the government's press secretary. Initial reports from military commanders said 481 homes had been blown down or washed away.

"It doesn't look like we're going to have anywhere near the damage caused by Fifi," Padgett said. "This hurricane appears to be of less intensity and we are better prepared."

Hurricane Fifi tore along the same path in 1974, leaving 6,000 dead and 500,000 homeless and Honduras' agricultural economy reeling.

Padgett said about 2,000 persons were evacuated from Puerto Castilla and communications were down in many areas.

The Israelis got:

● A commitment for a separate peace treaty with Egypt, no matter what else happens. Jerusalem and Cairo will have the same kind of full diplomatic relations that the United States and Canada have.

● A promise of security (in the form of peace with its neighbors) in the West Bank, Gaza strip and Sinai that no amount of troops or territory could provide.

● A U.S. promise to build them two new airfields in the Negev desert to replace the four that are being given up by Israel in the Sinai.

The Israelis gave:

● An implied commitment to withdraw from most of the territory they have occupied since 1967.

● Limitation of their military occupation of the West Bank. Their remaining troops, about half of what they now have, will be restricted to certain enclaves.

● Recognition that the legitimate rights of the Palestinians must be recognized as part of a Middle East solution.

The Egyptians got:

● The prospect of the end of Israeli military occupation and the promise of the return of almost all Egyptian territory lost during the 1967 war, including four airfields built since then by the Israelis.

● The Israelis to stop building further settlements in the Sinai and Gaza Strip, and at least a temporary halt, for the duration of the negotiations, of new settlements in the West Bank.

● American participation as a full and continuing partner in the Middle East.

● The return of sovereignty in the Sinai Peninsula.

The Egyptians gave:

● Israel the full recognition it had sought.

● The concession that its troops and the type of armaments will be limited in certain parts of Egyptian sovereign territory.

● Israel the right to veto members of the Egyptian and Jordanian delegations. An eventual Palestinian delegation will not be subject to Israeli vetoes.

Sinai towns may prove fatal flaw

By FRANK CREPEAU

TEL AVIV (AP)—The great unresolved issue of the Camp David Mideast summit is the future of about 100 Jewish settlements on occupied Arab land.

Israel is faced with a crucial decision on those settlements, a decision which could be the key to ultimate peace in the Middle East.

The settlements issue will apparently have to be overcome before there can be progress on other major and equally complicated issues, such as the political future of the West Bank and Gaza and the emotional issue of control of Jerusalem, with its Jewish, Moslem and Christian holy places.

For Israel, the settlements are a cornerstone of Zionism, clothed in the mystique of Jews putting down new roots in the Promised Land and defending the borders of the Jewish state. For Arabs, each settlement is a constant injury to Arab pride and an intolerable Jewish presence on Arab land.

The settlements, mostly small outposts of 100 families or fewer, contain about 10,000

Israelis, but the symbolic importance of the outposts is far greater than the number of settlers.

The settlements stretch from the slopes of Mount Hermon in occupied Syria in the north to sun-baked Sharm el-Sheikh on the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula. They dot the sweltering Jordan Valley in the east and spread along the Mediterranean coastline of the Sinai to the west of Israel.

Settlements started going up after Israel captured these lands in the 1967 war, and the settlement movement gained new force when Prime Minister Menachem Begin came to power in 1977, proclaiming the West Bank of the Jordan River "liberated territory."

For Begin, and many Israelis, the West Bank is the land God promised to the Jews. As prime minister, Begin has tried to work toward a peace agreement which would safeguard the existing settlements and the right of Jews to live in the West Bank.

It was on the settlement issue—specifically Jewish

Aftershocks rock Iran Burial teams can't keep up with bodies

TABAS, Iran (AP)—Aftershocks rolled Monday across the parched countryside of northeastern Iran where at least 15,000 persons were believed killed in a giant quake that demolished 40 towns and villages and badly damaged 60 others.

In this oasis city, at the quake's epicentre, the dead were stretched out under the palm trees, their bodies frozen in grotesque postures of sudden death and wrapped in white sheets or colorful hand-woven cloth.

Gravediggers bit into the coarse, hard earth, scraping out shallow graves. They could not keep up with the steady procession of bodies brought by truck and car, and the dead lay in the sun as a Moslem clergyman prayed over them.

The town's minarets, mosques and mud-brick houses crumbled under the force of the Saturday evening tremors, giving this ancient city about 640 kilometres southeast of the capital of Tehran the appearance of a flattened sand castle. Only a few buildings escaped major damage.

The quake, Iran's worst this year, killed an estimated three-quarters of Tabas' 13,000 residents. Most of the survivors were seriously injured and the most severely hurt were flown to Tehran for treatment.

Officials feared the death toll from the quake, 7.7 on the Richter scale, would go past the 15,000 mark as reports were received from remote villages surrounding Tabas, where thousands were believed buried in the rubble.

The Iranian army sent 700 soldiers, four medical teams and numerous rescue workers to help house about 1,000

survivors in tents along Tabas' dirt airport runway.

Meanwhile, new tremors were felt Monday. They lasted only a few moments, but residents feared a second major quake.

An earthquake registering 6.5 on the Richter scale rocked the same area on Aug. 31, 1968. Tabas suffered some damage and 12,000 people in the area were killed.

Davis fined $1,000, probation ordered

VANCOUVER (CP)—Former transport minister Jack Davis, 62, was fined $1,000 and placed on probation for two months Monday in county court for defrauding the provincial government of $1,074 by misrepresenting his travel expenses.

The sentence came after character witnesses appeared for the former federal Liberal cabinet minister and he announced his resignation as a member of Premier Bennett's Social Credit government.

The premier said from Kelowna that it was "difficult to accept the reality of a colleague's announced resignation under such difficult circumstances. Those of us who are in public life realize how difficult it can be and we accept that."

"However, no one can be unfeeling about the unfortunate circumstances surrounding Mr. Davis' case. As premier, I regret that it has happened and I have the greatest sympathy for both my former colleague and his family."

"Mr. Davis has given long service to this province and this country as a public servant and as a private citizen and I feel that it would be entirely appropriate for me to thank him publicly for that service at this time."

Bennett gave no indication of a byelection date.

Hurricane Greta slams Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA (AP)—Hurricane Greta swept past Honduras' north coast late Monday, its torrential rains and 200-kilometre-an-hour winds destroying hundreds of homes as it headed for landfall on the small British colony of Belize.

"We have no reports of deaths or injuries as yet, but many homes have been destroyed," said Herman Allan Padgett, the government's press secretary. Initial reports from military commanders said 481 homes had been blown down or washed away.

"It doesn't look like we're going to have anywhere near the damage caused by Fifi," Padgett said. "This hurricane appears to be of less intensity and we are better prepared."

Hurricane Fifi tore along the same path in 1974, leaving 6,000 dead and 500,000 homeless and Honduras' agricultural economy reeling.

Padgett said about 2,000 persons were evacuated from Puerto Castilla and communications were down in many areas.

Canadian Chamber lacks majority

Capital gains tax resolution fails

Loto Canada Inc.
Appointment notice

William L. McEwen

Charles V. Keating, Chairman, takes pleasure in announcing the appointment of William L. McEwen of West Vancouver, B.C. to the Board of Directors of Loto Canada Inc.

Mr. McEwen has extensive experience in business communications, marketing and sport. Mr. McEwen is director of CHUM Western Ltd. (CFUN radio station and Muzak of B.C.) and is a member of the B.C. Advisory Council to the Federal Business Development Bank.

He brings the National Lottery for amateur sport a long experience in both the amateur and professional sport fields. He was president of the Sports Federation of Canada and a member of the National Advisory Council on Fitness and Amateur Sport. He was president of the Canadian Amateur Football Association and governor of Hockey Canada.

He is a director of Northwest Sports which owns the Vancouver Canucks Hockey Club. A past president of the BC Lions Football Club, he is a member of their Board of Governors.

Mr. McEwen was born and raised in Ottawa and has been a resident of West Vancouver, B.C. since 1971.

HALIFAX (CP) — Two separate proposals to abolish the capital gains tax were narrowly defeated Monday by delegates attending the 49th annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Both votes were in favor of abolition but did not carry because they lacked the required two-thirds majority. The first vote was 85-54 in favor of abolition but only 139 of the 157 voting delegates were present when the issue first came to the floor after a vigorous debate.

In the afternoon session, the vote on an Ottawa resolution was 69-50 for abolition.

One proposed adjustment was to apply the tax only to corporations, not individuals.

The tax on sales of assets or equity was introduced in the early 1970s amid much controversy as a means of establishing equity in the tax system.

The tax applies to such activities as profits made by corporations on sales of assets such as buildings or factories, or on individuals who make gains on sales of stocks or personal assets such as art or jewelry.

Tax on capital gains accounts for less than one per cent of the government's total tax revenue.

Delegates to the three-day convention, which ends today, dealt with a number of other resolutions, including one calling for elimination or reduction of government regulations which was approved.

They endorsed a resolution—the one which contained the controversial proposal on capital gains—to increase the basic investment tax to 10 per cent and to cut the basic corporate tax rate by one percentage point a year in a five-year period starting Jan. 1, 1979.

A proposal from a delegate from Saint Ste. Marie, Ont., seeking a proper balance between the absolute requirements of the environment and the "need to sustain the health and growth of industry" was withdrawn but then later reintroduced and approved following a procedural vote.

The Ottawa delegation pushed through an amendment to a Vancouver resolution on mineral resources policy urging the federal government to provide Canadian producers with the same kind of financial assistance given to foreign industrial developers.

The reference was to such federal bodies as the Export Development Corp., which provides loans and credits to foreigners to encourage investment but not to Canadians.

Approved was a resolution urging Ottawa to encourage an aggressive reforestation program. The concern here was for recent federal spending cuts which have affected forestry research grants.

Delegates were concerned because forestry is a major industry in at least five Canadian provinces. An amendment was swiftly endorsed urging a joint federal-provincial effort to use monies saved from cuts in unemployment insurance to create jobs in reforestation projects.

One delegate said such a move could create 400,000 jobs in the industry.

On Canadian monetary policy, the convention accepted a watershed resolution urging the federal government to take the lead in reducing the governments' share of the gross national product.

Currently, governments' influence on the economy is equal to 42 per cent of the gross national product but some delegates wanted the resolution to specifically urge that this figure be reduced to 35 per cent over five years.

Wall St. Journal view on dollar
sents it diving

MONTREAL (CP) — Heavy selling of the Canadian dollar on international money markets Monday sent it on its sharpest one-day drop since Aug. 23, as it lost nearly three-eighths of a cent against its American counterpart.

It closed at 85.54 U.S. cents on the inter-bank wholesale market, down 37-100 of a cent from Friday's closing rate of 85.91 cents.

Traders described the market as "one-way down" with big investors quickly selling their Canadian dollars for currencies they felt were more secure.

One senior trader linked the sudden selling binge to a lengthy analysis of the dollar's situation published Monday in the Wall Street Journal.

The article, described by the trader as very negative, "helped a lot of people make up their mind to sell Canada."

In the article, the influential financial daily quoted market participants as questioning an apparent lack of policy by the federal government to the dollar's slide.

"Everybody has been really concerned," the trader said. "They look at the government and say to themselves what they are doing."

In recent weeks the dollar, which was worth 86.99 cents on Sept. 1, has been at its lowest since May, 1933, when it was valued at 86.77 cents.

It had been hovering within 10 points of the psychologically-important 86-cent margin for a week, and traders had expected it to remain there for the remainder of the month.

TOUGH SEVEN YARDS is ground out by Andy Johnson of New England before he is pulled down by Lyle Blackwood (44) and Lloyd Mumphord (12) of Baltimore.

Washington packs punch as Colts end point famine

Baltimore Colts, outscored 86-0 in their first two games of the National Football League season, exploded with a vengeance on Monday night.

With running back Joe Washington supplying the punch, the injury-riddled Colts stunned New England Patriots 34-27 in a nationallytelecast game from Foxboro, Mass.

Washington, acquired from San Diego in the trade which sent Lydell Mitchell to the Chargers, scored three touchdowns and passed for another as the Colts handed the Patriots their second loss in three starts.

New England had tied the score with 1:32 left after recovering an onside kick and moving to the one-yard line with the help of a defensive holding penalty. Sam Cunningham bulldozed into the end zone and kicker John Smith, ailing with a pulled thigh muscle, booted the extra point to tie the game 27-27.

But Washington took the ensuing kickoff and broke up the left sideline behind a wedge of blockers for the winning touchdown.

Baltimore struck for three touchdowns earlier in the fourth quarter as Washington passed 54 yards to wide receiver Roger Carr on a half-back option play and took a 23-yard strike from quarterback Bill Troup, who was substituting for injured star Bert Jones. Troup also connected with a 67-yard bomb to Carr with 8:19 left for a 27-13 lead.

more during Monday night National Football League action in Foxboro, Mass., where the Colts outscored the host Patriots 34-27.

Sunday's action was highlighted by Los Angeles Rams, who knocked off previously unbeaten Dallas Cowboys 27-14; Tampa Bay Buccaneers, 16-10 upsets of Minnesota Vikings; and Seattle Seahawks, who travelled to New York to post a 24-17 win over the Jets.

"Team defence makes the difference," said Los Angeles defensive end Jack Youngblood after the Rams picked off four of Roger Staubach's passes and held Dallas to 96 yards rushing, including only 38 yards in 19 carries by Tony Dorsett.

An interception set up the Rams first TD and a 43-yard interception return by Rod Perry accounted for an insurance score in the closing minutes.

Ram quarterback Pat Haden threw for two touchdowns—a 21-yarder to Ron Jesse in the second quarter and a picture-perfect 43-yard bomb to Willie Miller to snap a 14-14 tie mid-way through the final period.

After three weeks, there are five unbeaten teams in the NFL. Besides Los Angeles, the clubs with 3-0 records are Chicago Bears, who blanked Detroit Lions 19-0;

Pittsburgh Steelers, who trounced Cincinnati Bengals 28-3; Cleveland Browns, who defeated Atlanta Falcons 24-16; and Washington Redskins, who beat St. Louis Cardinals 28-10.

Chicago scored three times in just over four minutes of the third quarter to lead 19-0 over the Bears.

Pittsburgh's 28 Cincinnati 3 Terry Bradshaw completed 14 of 19 passes for 242 yards, including scoring passes of 38 and 12 yards to tight end Bennie Cunningham, as Pittsburgh ripped apart Cincinnati for 407 yards total offense and three touchdowns.

Cincinnati's offense has been crippled by the loss of quarterback Kim Anderson.

Cleveland 16 Atlanta 16 Brian Stoltz hit on 20 of 35 passes for 219 yards and two touchdowns and also scored on a two-yard run for the unbeaten Browns, who turned back the second-half comeback by the Falcons that was led by Steve Bartkowski, making his first appearance of the season.

Washington 28 St. Louis 10 Rookie Tony Green, a 5-foot-9 speedster, raced 99 yards on a kickoff return for one of three Washington touchdowns in the first half as the Redskins beat St. Louis.

Mark van Eden rushed for a career-high 151 yards as Oakland rolled up 348 yards on the ground in beating Green Bay. In addition, Arthur Whittling ran for two touchdowns and Terry Bradshaw passed for one.

Seattle 24 New York Jets 17 Quarterback Jim Zorn wanted to a first down on a fake field goal in the fourth quarter, setting up fullback David Sims' third touchdown of the game for the Seahawks. The three-yard scoring run with 10:20 to play capped a 14-14 tie.

In the next play, Tampa Bay rookie Doug Williams fired a bullet to Morris Owens for the winning touchdown.

Houston 20 San Francisco 19 Houston's Tom Fritsch kicked a 19-yard field goal with 1:16 to play to cap an 86-yard, 11-play drive and thwart a San Francisco comeback. The Oilers' 12th victory in 13 games came on a pair of second-half TD passes by Steve Deberg, who completed 20 of 32 for 321 yards.

Philadelphia 24 New Orleans 17 Ron Jaworski and Harold Carmichael combined on second-half scoring passes of 18 and 6 yards for Philadelphia, although the Eagles needed an interception in the end zone by John Sanders with 13 seconds left to finish it off.

NY Giants 26 Kansas City 10 The Giants jumped in front on a pair of first-quarter scoring passes by Joe Pisarcik and Kansas City, which relies on a ball-control offense from its wing-t formation, never caught up.

"It's so nice to put two out there fast," said Pisarcik. "They play so conservative that when that happened, they didn't know what to do—cry or call the police. Maybe they should have called the police."

Denver 27 San Diego 14 All game long, San Diego elected to kick away from Denver return specialist Rick Upchurch, but in the fourth quarter the Chargers, nursing a 14-13 lead, changed strategy.

The move backfired as Upchurch grabbed Jeff Webb's long, high punt and raced 78 yards for the go-ahead touchdown with 2:17 to play.

Judge rules McCourt can stay with Wings

DETROIT (AP) — A federal judge ruled Monday the National Hockey League compensation requirements for teams that sign free agents are an illegal restraint of trade.

Judge Robert Demaschio declared that Detroit Red Wing centre Dale McCourt did not have to report to Los Angeles Kings as compensation for Detroit's signing of goaltender Rogie Vachon.

Demaschio was ruling on a temporary injunction being sought by McCourt, which would permit him to remain in Detroit pending the outcome of his lawsuit seeking to overturn an arbitrator's decision awarding him to the Kings as compensation for Vachon, who became a free agent after playing out his option last season with the Kings.

McCourt, 21, who enjoyed a sensational rookie season in Detroit, filed the lawsuit after an arbitrator made him the compensation to the Kings for their loss of Vachon.

The compensation rule imposes a "perpetual restriction on a player's inherent right to freely contract for his services," Demaschio said.

The judge cited a suit filed by former Baltimore Colt player John Mackey against the National Football League, which resulted in a court ruling against the NFL's so-called Rozelle Rule. That rule imposed similar penalties on teams which signed free agents.

Like the Rozelle rule, Demaschio said the NHL's Rule 9A "applies to all players without regard to their status or ability."

"It unreasonably restrains trade and commerce" in violation of a provision of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, Demaschio said.

In a five-count complaint, McCourt charged that the Kings, the Wings and the NHL Players' Association violated anti-trust laws, restraint of trade, restraint of employment, breached his contract with Detroit and abused arbitration procedures in agreeing to the compensation provisions of the NHL.

The compensation rule, Demaschio said, is "not necessary to maintain competitive balance in the National Hockey League" and it "cannot be justified by any legitimate business purpose."

McCourt's lawyer, Brian Smith, said the 21-year-old centre would report today to the Wings' training camp, which opened Monday in Kalamazoo, Mich.

"My lawyer called me with the verdict," McCourt said in an interview from his home near Sudbury. "I'm just happy, that's all."

McCourt said he contacted Ted Lindsay, Wings' general manager, later in the day. "He said he was happy to have me back," McCourt said. "After that all we talked about was my travel arrangements to get to camp."

"I've got nothing bad to say about Los Angeles. It's just that I was so well treated by the coach and the management in Detroit, I wanted to finish out at least the term of my contract."

Although the judge ruled only on McCourt's request for a temporary restraining order, Smith insisted the decision would affect all league free agents.

A date for the hearing on the full lawsuit, which could shake the foundations of professional sports if upheld, was not set.

Demaschio concluded that the Kings had alternatives to demanding such compensation from Detroit.

"We agree that the compensation can be obtained just as easily through wisely selected draft choices," he said.

In New York, NHL president John Ziegler issued a terse statement saying only that the NHL had been apprised of the court ruling.

"We are awaiting the full written text of the court opinion. Any further action by the NHL must await a review by our counsel of the opinion and until such time we will have no further comment."

General manager Jake Milford of Vancouver was unhappy with the decision.

"The decision will have an adverse affect on all NHL teams," said Milford at the team's training camp at Courtenay. "It's a great thing for the players, but will hurt hockey, especially the poorer teams."

"It will put a lot of clubs in an awful financial situation. What's to stop a rich team like New York (Rangers) from taking away your players... there's no compensation involved."

Figueroa off form but edges Brewers

Ed Figueroa has been in baseball long enough to know that the mark of a good pitcher is to win a game in which he doesn't have his best stuff.

That was what the New York righthander did Monday night, scattering seven hits for a 4-3 victory over Milwaukee Brewers that kept the leading Yankees 2½ games in front of Boston in the American League East Division. The Red Sox kept pace with a 5-4, 11-inning victory over Detroit Tigers. On Sunday, the Red Sox salvaged a 5-0 victory over New York which enabled them to leave Yankee Stadium with a 1-2 mark for their crucial week-end series.

In other American League games on a light Monday schedule, Minnesota Twins whipped California Angels 10-4 and Baltimore Orioles downed Cleveland Indians 10-3.

"It was a tough game to pitch, with the cold and the mist," said Figueroa, after winning his 11th game in his last 13 decisions and running his season record to 18-9.

Figueroa has been a vital part of the Yankees' recent push to the top of the East. He was 7-7 in mid-July when the team started its push to first place and began winning consistently when new manager Bob Lemon put him on a four-day rotation instead of the five or six he was on when Billy Martin managed the team.

Reggie Jackson and Lou Piniella slugged consecutive home runs and Mickey Rivers' run-scoring infield single drove in the winning run, giving Figueroa and the Yankees the victory.

Jerry Remy's run-scoring single in the 11th gave Boston its win.

Butch Hobson walked leading off the 11th and Jack Brohamer followed with a pinch-single—the first hit in 4 1-3 relief innings off rookie Steve Baker, 1-3.

John Hiller came in and got Dwight Evans to ground out and Rick Burleson to hit into a fielder's choice, with pinch-runner Frank Duffy thrown out at home.

Remy followed with his line single to centre. Ron LeFlore might have had a shot at pinch-runner Garry Hancock at the plate but over-ran the ball.

times, leading Baltimore past Cleveland.

Philadelphia Phillies lost 2-0 to New York Mets on Sunday and have now seen a five-game National League East Division lead shrink to two in the past six games. During that stretch, the Phils were 3-3 and the Pirates 6-0. Each team has 13 games remaining.

Pittsburgh won its sixth in a row and 19th straight at home, defeating Montreal Expos 5-3 Sunday on the slugging of Dave Parker and the plating of Bert Blyleven and Kent Tekulve.

Mike LaCoss scattered seven hits for his first major league shutout and Ken Griffey and Johnny Bench led a nine-hit offense with three singles apiece as Cincinnati Reds beat Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0.

The Dodgers' magic number for clinching a second straight National League West baseball championship remained at five as the second-place Reds closed to within 7½ games.

LaCoss, 4-7, struck out six, walked two and pitched out of a bases-loaded situation in the fourth inning, ending a personal six-game losing streak. The victory was his first since Aug. 5.

Whalers obtain ace goalkeeper

HARTFORD (AP) — John Garrett, a World Hockey Association all-star goaltender while playing for Birmingham Bulls, has signed a multi-year contract with New England Whalers. Garrett, who has logged more than 3,000 minutes on the ice during his last four seasons, has an overall record of 128 victories, 134 losses, 11 ties.

Island runner tops field

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. — Gail McKee of Comox completed a 42.105-kilometre course in two hours, 49 minutes, 56 seconds Sunday as the first woman to finish the Canadian national marathon championships.

Bruce Shaw of Victoria was fifth among the men, with a time of 2:32:37, as three Toronto runners grabbed the spotlight in the field of 111 competitors.

Rick Hughton placed first in 2:21:54, Mike Dyon ran second in 2:23:20 and third place went to Bob Legge, in 2:25:33.

The three Toronto men broke away from the pack early, while brisk winds off Northumberland Strait hindered the runners.

Swedes capitalize on penalty edge

GOTEBORG, Sweden (CP) — The Swedish under-24 national team collected five power-play goals Monday night en route to an 8-4 win over Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association in an exhibition game watched by just 490 fans.

The loss for the touring Oilers was their first in four games, following a 3-3 tie with Orebro, a 4-4 tie with Jonkoping and a 6-5 victory over the same under-24 team Sunday.

The Oilers were obviously weary, playing their fourth games in five days, and trailed 3-2 after one period and 5-3 after two.

Kent Andersson and Jan Eriksson each scored twice for the Swedes. Ulf Wein-Stock, Anders Brostrom, Anders Hakanson and Rolf

Jim Mayer scored two unassisted goals—one while the Oilers were short-handed—to lead the Edmonton offence.

Rookie Wes George also scored twice for Edmonton.

Referee Ulf Lindgren called 13 of 16 minors in the game against Edmonton players and defencemen Dave Langevin took the game's only misconduct.

The Oilers played without veteran winger Bill Goldsworthy, who drew a one-game suspension for jostling an official after a penalty shot was called against Edmonton with two seconds remaining in Sunday's victory.

Consistency pays off

Haslam clinches title

Roy Haslam of Victoria is champion of the 1978 International Drivers Challenge series for open superstocks.

With one race remaining in the summer-long series, Haslam has a 242-point lead over Roy Smith of Victoria and only 236 points are up for grabs at the American 150 on Oct. 1 at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Wash.

A consistent finisher all season, Haslam finished second to Don Dowdy of Tacoma on Sunday in the Nanaimo 75 at Grandview Bowl and boosted his points total to 2,011.

Smith, who set a track record of 16.18 seconds to better the mark of 16.49 set by Hershel McGriff of Bridal Veil, Ore., in 1973, was running second to Dowdy but lost any chance of winning on lap 66

THE WOODLANDS, Tex. (Reuter) — Tom Okker and Wojtek Fibak, the No. 2 seeds, won a marathon battle Sunday over Marty Riessen and Sherwood Stewart in the $125,000 world of doubles tennis tournament.

NY Giants 26 Kansas City 10 The Giants jumped in front on a pair of first-quarter scoring passes by Joe Pisarcik and Kansas City, which relies on a ball-control offense from its wing-t formation, never caught up.

Gilliam remains on critical list

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Jim Gilliam, 49, former star player and currently a coach with Los Angeles Dodgers, remained in a coma and in critical condition Monday after suffering a brain hemorrhage.

Officials at Daniel Freeman Hospital said Gilliam, who collapsed at his home Friday and underwent surgery, has not recovered consciousness.

A member of the National League baseball team's organization for 26 years, Gilliam played with the club from 1953-1967 and then became a full-time coach.

Canadian yacht limps into port

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — American defender Agape appeared the winner Monday of the latest round of Canada's Cup yacht competition, as Canadian challenger Evergreen limped back to port again.

The swift Royal Hamilton Yacht Club craft was towed back to Port Huron where skipper Don Green was expected to assess the most recent damage which ate heavily into its four-minute lead over Agape in the long-distance Lake Huron race.

Officials at the host Detroit Bayview Yacht Club said the challenger's mast either snapped or popped from its socket about 11:30 a.m., two-thirds of the way into the race.

The craft had passed the fourth mark and was in front of the American boat when the accident occurred, officials said.

Travellers of the classic kind

They came from everywhere for the recent Malahat Challenge featuring classic cars at their finest. For example, though a bit damp from intermittent rain, Jack Wolf of Portland, Ore., stands proudly beside his 1911 Willys Overland which he brought to this fourth annual event. And there was certainly no lack of interesting features, as this brass coach lamp and special horn on one of entries can attest. Colonist's Nanaimo girl-about-town Donna Reimer took the striking photographs before racers left Nanaimo for Victoria, a trip which although wet at times, proved enjoyable for most of those taking part.

Trustee urges more leadership

NANAIMO — A School District 68 trustee who has announced that he will not seek re-election again this year, has given eight suggestions to a school board, which he said has not given strong leadership.

Dr. Giuseppe Multari, who has served two terms of two years as school trustee, announced that he will not be seeking a third term and criticized the present board.

Multari said that he believes the school district staff has done a good job "in spite of the lack of strong leadership from the board of school trustees and in spite of pressure from some militant staff members and/or groups."

Multari said that he was not seeking re-election to allow more time for his family and community activities.

But, he pledged to continue his interests in education from outside the board table, as the father of school-aged children and in his work as a child psychologist.

Among the eight suggestions he made to the board was one not to let partisan politics interfere with education. He urged those with partisan views to declare their interests during the election campaign.

Multari also advised the board consider educational needs the first priority of the school district, and not to overemphasize development of physical activities as opposed to student's minds.

Discipline in the schools should be stepped up, he said, and public involvement in education could be a dangerous trend away from the accountability of the classroom teacher.

He also recommended that the schools spend less time in sideline activities, which he said are the responsibility of the family, and more time investigating the causes of school dropout.

Finally, he said, "education must not be viewed as a right to be abused but a right to be deserved."

In other education news in

Nanaimo, while the focus of Malaspina College's activities has always been the main Nanaimo campus, the college is also involved in providing an ever-increasing level of services to all the other main centres of population in the Central Vancouver Island region.

A good example of this is the first-year university-level geography course, which will be offered in the 1978-79 academic year in four different centres — Duncan, Powell River, Parksville and Lake Cowichan.

Instructor Elizabeth Forrester sees this particular course as fitting into the category of distance education, a concept in which the education is brought to the student by a variety of means rather than having the student travel from his or her home location to a college or university.

In this case Forrester will be teaching the course in all four centres starting with Geography 120 (An Introduction to Human Geography) in the fall semester and going on to Geography 110 (Man and the Environment) in the new year.

Students will meet with their instructor at least once a month in each centre and will be working through a planned list of assignments and directed reading backed by a wide range of sophisticated resource material, including specially prepared slide-tape presentations.

No blame in rafting death

CAMPBELL RIVER — A coroner's jury presided over by district coroner Ken Scott has attached no blame in the accidental drowning death of 19-year-old Kenneth Harold Magnusson in a practice run down the Campbell River the day prior to the annual Salmon Festival raft race earlier this summer.

However, after hearing from witnesses that none of the four teenagers on the craft was wearing a lifejacket and that there were few conditions laid down to qualify for the race, the jury made two safety recommendations:

"That entrants in the raft race be required to wear their lifejackets at all times, including practice runs, and that steps be taken to enforce said rules by the Salmon Festival raft race committee and by the RCMP; that the Salmon Festival raft race committee examine its raft specifications and its race safety regulations with a view to preventing mishaps."

Witnesses said the raft had been given a two-minute inspection by festival officials prior to the run and the teenagers were only told to round off the edges of the raft before it was approved.

The raft was described as consisting of three inner tubes — two at the back and one in front — with two sheets of plywood laid on top in the shape of a T, held together with rope passed through holes drilled in the sheets of plywood. Two paddles were used for steering.

The jury was told that the raft struck the piling supporting the Comox Logging bridge and flipped over, throwing the four occupants into the water.

Three of them managed to reach shore but Magnusson drowned despite their efforts to save him.

The jury brought in the recommendation after hearing Coroner Scott express concern over certain aspects of the Salmon Festival.

"I have deep concern over this incident," he said, "primarily because the raft race is an occurrence that comes up every year with the festival. The festival is a happy event for Campbell River but it seems that whenever there is a situation like that, the rules are sort of relaxed, particularly in the downtown area."

"The police turn their backs on a lot of shenanigans they would not normally allow, particularly with regard to the liquor act, and I would hate to think that safety is ignored."

The jury was told that an autopsy had shown no trace of alcohol or other drugs in the body and that death was caused by drowning.

Drama on CB radio

Borrowed set probably saved 2 lives

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — A borrowed hand-held CB set aboard on a sailing trip from Vancouver to Nanaimo probably saved the lives of two Nanaimo men Saturday night.

Nanaimo Emergency Program co-ordinator Ian Hetherington said Sunday that by the time his people located Allan and Roger MacDonald of Nanaimo, their 27-foot sailboat had just about gone under.

The emergency program people were searching for the brothers because they had broadcast a mayday on a portable CB set borrowed earlier that day from Allan's father-in-law.

Mrs. Charlotte Priest of Vancouver, Allan MacDonald's mother-in-law, said that her husband's CB set had been handed to the two at the last minute "in case something happened."

What happened was that a plastic fitting popped off below water line, and water poured into the boat. Floating debris below decks knocked off the second fitting.

Efforts by both the two brothers, and later the emergency rescue people, to plug the holes were unsuccessful, and it took two pumps to keep the boat afloat as it was towed to Dugan Bay on Gabriola Island.

Allan MacDonald, 27, and his brother Roger, 18, were sailing the recently-purchased Buccaneer sailboat when the mishap occurred.

The trip Saturday was started with good sea conditions, after an attempt to bring the boat to Vancouver Island on Friday was abandoned when rough seas were encountered.

Mrs. Priest said that it was the rough trip on Friday that had led to the decision to take the CB along on Saturday.

Hetherington said that the RCMP relayed the mayday call from the sailboat to the emergency program at about 8:43 p.m. Saturday.

NEP sent a 26-foot boat to the rescue, and was soon in contact with the MacDonalds on Channel 14 of the CB.

But CB interference created problems locating the sailboat — which was first believed to be off Snake Island, and was found east of Entrance Island.

NEP called in the Vancouver-based Coast Guard hovercraft, which assisted in the rescue.

The seas were rough, Hetherington said, with about six-to-seven-foot swells.

"I figure it's because of the CB that the two are alive," Hetherington said Sunday.

Allan MacDonald said that he and his brother owed their lives to the CB and the good work of Hetherington and his emergency program personnel.

The two brothers had a dinghy and flares aboard, but one attempt to locate the boat by flares had failed.

MacDonald said that at the rate the boat was drifting, and with the stormy condition of the seas, the two would have been lucky to stay alive aboard the dinghy long enough for rescue.

"We are drifting away from Gabriola and away from Vancouver, down the strait."

Meanwhile, a 26-year-old Cowichan Bay man was not so lucky Saturday.

The body of Martin Neil Whittingham was found inside a 16-foot sailboat adrift near Winchelsea Island.

Parksville RCMP said that Whittingham was found by a U.S. survey ship about seven miles east northeast of Winchelsea Island at 3 p.m. Saturday.

The boat was swamped. RCMP were continuing their investigations, but no foul play was suspected.

And at Lake Cowichan, Kenneth George Johnson, 18, of 5695 Menzies Road in Duncan, was killed in an automobile accident on the weekend.

RCMP said the accident occurred when the Johnson vehicle collided with an unoccupied automobile parked on the South Shore Road.

David Geier, 18, also of Duncan, who was the only passenger in the Johnson car, escaped injury.

Islanders map E&N strategy

COURTENAY — A sparse turnout and a noticeable lack of downtown merchants marked the recent meeting of the local branch of the Save the E&N Committee.

John Cooper of Victoria, steering committee chairman, was present while Ross Sinclair chaired the meeting.

Sinclair along with Ald. Alice Bullen of Comox and Ald. John Harkins of Cumberland make up the local group but wanted to expand the local committee.

Several of those present, which included a representative of the chamber of commerce, agreed to join the committee.

The chamber has made the E&N project its major thrust for the remainder of this year.

Several plans for the train schedule were outlined, including one which would see three trains each day running between Courtenay and Victoria with the last train into Courtenay about 10:30 p.m.

Co-op shows improvement

CAMPBELL RIVER — The North Island Consumer Services Co-Operative is making a slow recovery, according to its annual report due to be presented at the annual meeting on Thursday.

The co-op has cut its annual loss from $154,457 last year to $58,346 this year. At the same time, the annual audit discloses, sales increased from $3,580,197 in June last year to $3,954,764 by June 24 this year.

President Allan Barras states in his annual report that the board of directors now feels confident enough to bring a motion to the members that it refund shares to the estates of dead members and to people who have moved away from the area and resigned.

A freeze on membership payouts was imposed because of previous deficits by the co-op, and the membership fee was doubled to $100.

Income for the past year is given as $608,597, compared with $433,878 at the same time in 1977, and expenses for the 1977-78 period totalled $666,943. Expenses for the previous fiscal year came to $588,335.

Nanaimo shop centre takes another big step

Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — A $24 million Hudson's Bay shopping centre being planned for undeveloped land north of Nanaimo took a step closer to reality recently when it received approval from the city's shopping centre committee.

Seven city aldermen who attended the committee meeting voted unanimously to recommend to the full council that the Rutherford Road shopping centre development permit be approved.

The committee reviewed the development permit clause by clause before giving its stamp of approval.

The only contentious issue was whether the city's advisory planning commission should have a look at the development permit before the council approved it, but that debate was resolved by a simple matter of rewording.

The APC will be sent a copy of the development permit, and can make comments on it, but is not being formally asked to give its approval or rejection.

The development permit was the result of three meetings between the city planning staff and Howard Nemtin Associates, consultants for Hudson's Bay.

The development permit covers only the 50 acres that will be used for the shopping centre, and plans to develop it for residences later.

The nearest existing neighbor to the proposed centre is about 800 feet from the edge of the north centre's parking lot.

Department of highways approval has been given in principle to the project, Nemtin said. Only the engineering details remain to be worked out, and those will take several months.

Hudson's Bay has dedicated enough property on the Island Highway side of the proposed centre to allow the highway to be six lanes wide plus a turning lane.

Main access to the centre will be off Rutherford Road, near its intersection with the Island Highway. There will also be traffic lights and an access off a new road, called Oliver, which will intersect the Island Highway north of Rutherford Road.

Hudson's Bay had agreed to pay $354,000 of highway costs to the city and the department of highways.

The first phase of the shopping centre is planned to be 320,000 square feet and cost $17 million. Parking will be provided for 1,800 cars.

A unique feature of the centre is that there will be parking for recreational vehicles. Nemtin said that the regular parking spaces, also, will be larger than usual.

Another unique feature of the centre will be its landscaping.

Nemtin said that to solve a drainage problem on the property, the developers have decided to create a pond along the Island Highway side of the property.

Not only will the pond create unique landscaping, he said, it will handle the drainage problem to the satisfaction of the fish and wildlife branch of the provincial government.

An oil skimmer will be installed to make sure the water which drains off the parking lot does not damage the ecology downstream.

Waterfalls will be used to aerate the water, and it is hoped wild ducks and geese will make the pond their home.

The developers have also agreed to dedicate 7.5 acres of their property outside the shopping centre site for public use. That use, for schools or parks, will be decided on later, as will the exact location of the property.

Committee members agreed on the recommendation that council approve the development permit, but disagreed on the timing.

Ald. Gino Sedola wanted the permit to go back to the APC, which had already approved the centre in principle.

But Ald. Nelson Allen reacted angrily, accusing committee chairman Ray Brookbank, and later Sedola, of "foot-dragging" on the proposal.

Allen said that the APC had its say and should not be consulted again.

What loomed as a major confrontation was straightened out when Allen and Sedola agreed that the development permit could be sent to the APC for its meeting today, and comments, if any, could be received by the council in time for the Sept. 25 meeting.

Once the development permit is okayed by council, the council must still approve rezoning and development permit bylaws for the centre and send those bylaws to public hearing before making the final decision on the matter.

How many arenas reaching point of no return?

PORT HARDY — The arena facility here has joined many others throughout the province in reaching a point where mounting deficits are causing major problems.

An operating deficit of nearly $10,000 last year at the G. E. Wilson arena has forced the Port Hardy and District Recreation Association to increase membership and user fees.

Rising costs of operation and maintenance were fingered as the major contributors to the deficit.

Last year the Comox Valley Sport Commission faced a similar problem and through special permission by government was allowed to levy an additional mill without referendum. The referendum to continue with the additional levy goes to the taxpayer this November.

However, in the Comox Valley the arena-pool complex is owned by the regional district.

In Port Hardy, the recreation association is the governing and fund-raising body. Last year many fund-raising activities were carried out to help reduce the huge deficit.

which it is expected may now be reduced to about $2,000.

More than $7,000 of the estimated $10,000 deficit was due to non-recurring expenses, at least for some time, of major work on the dehumidifier, water system and washrooms. However, the ice plant and arena roof present major problems to be faced in the coming year.

A major membership drive is to be undertaken with the new rate set at $175 for a family, up from $135, and $100 for a single membership, up from $75.

The full memberships entitle holders to free public skating, a reduction in minor hockey and figure skating costs and a reduction for curling and commercial hockey fees.

In addition, partial memberships are available to curlers.

Another change will be in fees charged non-members. In the past, rates charged have varied from group to group but a standardized non-member fee of $20 for adults and $10 for children has now been set.

Meanwhile, toll-free telephone service between Por-

Hardy and Port McNeill is due to be introduced by B.C. Telephone Co. by the end of October, according to a company spokesman. The new telephone directory to be issued in October will carry information and instructions regarding the new system.

B.C. Tel's Port Hardy manager Stan Miller says that because of equipment delivery problems, there is a possibility the new service may not be operational by the scheduled Oct. 1 target date. He says it will be a tight squeeze.

In another development,

Port McNeill will have a 24-hour taxi service within a month, says Deluxe Taxi Service owner and operator Helen Moore.

She says she and her husband will provide around the clock taxi service for the town from an office at the Dalewood Inn. The couple have two taxis and plan to add a third if business warrants.

The Moores bought the licence from the now-defunct Port McNeill Transportation Company, previously managed by former McNeill mayor Mas Nishiyama, who now lives in Coquitlam.

Mrs. Moore says she hopes to regain the service to Zeballos, which was discontinued by the defunct company. She also hopes to provide morning runs to Canadian Forest Products.

Hospital step taken

PORT MCNEILL—A. D. Storrie Construction Ltd. of Campbell River has been awarded the contract to build the Port McNeill Hospital, hospital society president Gerry Furney has announced.

Storrie Construction's bid of $851,555 was accepted by the provincial hospital planning department last week. The firm was the lowest of eight companies to submit tenders for construction of the 10-bed facility.

Total cost of the project is expected to reach $1,101,507, including cost of equipment, construction administration, engineering and surveying fees, landscaping and a resident field inspector's fees.

Furney expects the hospital will be in operation by next summer, provided construction gets underway immediately.

The regional hospital district bought the 3.11-acre site from the municipality last year.

Mount Waddington Regional District is expected to contribute $88,000 and local community groups, that spearheaded the campaign for a hospital, have raised funds for equipment not provided by the government.

However, only government funds will be spent on construction.

Also in Port McNeill, the completion date for the downtown mall under construction by General Properties is Nov. 1 but nothing is finalized as yet regarding who the tenants of the complex will be, according to manager Furney.

However, he says there is a considerable amount of interest being expressed by chain stores in Vancouver.

The $1 million-plus project, located in the heart of Port McNeill's commercial district, will eventually house five 1,000-square-foot stores fronting on Broughton Boulevard; two 2,500-square-foot stores fronting on Campbell Way; a 4,000 square-foot theatre and 10,000 square feet of second storey office space.

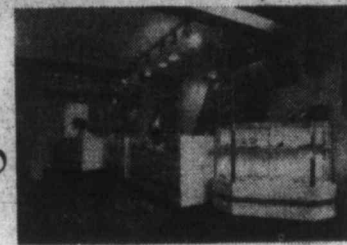

A second phase is planned for future expansion. A possible fourth shopping

Servant pickets on alert

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

The trenches are being dug today for a major battle between the provincial government and its unionized employees.

It isn't expected for several months, but B.C. Government Employees' Union general secretary John Fryer says the situation is serious enough to warrant advance warning for the public.

"Actually, we are trying to alert our members and the general public that we are going to be in for a tough set of negotiations," Fryer said in an interview Monday.

"Where the members are concerned, we want them to know they may be called on to walk the picket line this time. And for the public's sake, we think it's only fair to let it be known that there might be some inconvenience. It's better than waiting until the last minute and shocking everyone."

Job action wouldn't likely occur before August.

Normally, such comments might be written off as the first volley in the propaganda war that so often precedes major negotiations. But Fryer is basing his case this time on:

- The hard line that is being taken today against public sector employees everywhere;

- Solid indications that the B.C. government plans to "put its employees in their place";

- His expectation that the new "negative" bargaining approach will almost certainly be used by the government;

- The realization that the BCGEU was "within about eight hours of a strike" when settlement was reached on the last contract.

Turn this hope to reality, Carter urges Arab states

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Carter appealed to moderates in the Arab world Monday night to aid Egypt and Israel in the hazardous task of turning the Camp David "framework for peace" into "one of the bright moments in human history."

Carter told a nationally televised joint session of Congress

he would send Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to the Mideast today in a bid to get Jordan and Saudi Arabia to help turn "the promise of this moment" into reality.

Carter, who introduced Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to the cheering lawmakers, said he had asked other Arab leaders "to help sustain progress toward a comprehensive peace."

The two one-time enemies, sitting with first lady Rosalynn Carter in the House VIP gallery, applauded each other when Carter mentioned their names.

In the first apparent sign of serious Egyptian domestic opposition, Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel resigned in disagreement over Sadat's handling of the Camp David talks.

But the people of Israel and Egypt—divided by suspicion, fear and hostility since the birth of the Jewish state in 1948—greeted the outcome of the Camp David summit with tears, jubilation and sheer joy.

"Look, peace has come!" an emotional Jerusalem taxi driver shouted at the top of his lungs when he heard the news as he left for work along the twisting, cobblestoned streets of the holy city.

Carter also said that nations should "join in an effort to bring to an end the conflict and terrible suffering in Lebanon," but he offered no new initiatives in that direction.

"We need to consult closely with the Arab leaders, and I am pleased to say that King Hussein of Jordan and King Khalid of Saudi Arabia have now agreed to receive Secretary Vance," he said.

Carter said the secretary of state would try "to secure their support for the realization of the new hopes and dreams of the people of the Middle East."

"Today we are privileged to see the chance for one of the bright moments in human history—a chance that may open the way to peace," the president said.

He received a loud round of applause from Congress when he said the leaders of Israel and Egypt had challenged each other to speed up conclusion of a peace treaty in "a wonderful Christmas present for the world."

The president said the success of the 13-day summit exceeded his expectations, but he cautioned that the talks "left many difficult issues still to be resolved."

Carter spoke to Hussein by telephone as the monarch returned to Amman after cutting short a Mediterranean vacation. A U.S. official said Hussein declined to comment on the plan, saying he wanted time to study it.

Carter, Begin and Sadat announced the two-part framework for peace Sunday night with a televised show of hugs, smiles and laughs that obscured five major dangers:

- The first part, providing five years of limited self-rule on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, will fall apart unless Jordan and the Palestinians agree to accept it.

Grieving Iranians gather at Tabas after Saturday's quake

Aftershocks rock Iran

Burial teams can't keep up with bodies

TABAS, Iran (AP)—Aftershocks rolled Monday across the parched countryside of northeastern Iran where at least 15,000 persons were believed killed in a giant quake that demolished 40 towns and villages and badly damaged 80 others.

In this oasis city, at the quake's epicentre, the dead were stretched out under the palm trees, their bodies frozen in grotesque postures of sudden death and wrapped in white sheets or colorful hand-woven cloth.

Gravediggers bit into the coarse, hard earth, scraping out shallow graves. They could not keep up with the steady procession of bodies brought by truck and car, and the dead lay in the sun as a Moslem clergyman prayed over them.

The town's minarets, mosques and mud-brick houses crumbled under the force of the Saturday evening tremors, giving this ancient city about 640 kilometres southeast of the capital of Tehran the appearance of a flattened sand castle. Only a few buildings escaped major damage.

The quake, Iran's worst this year, killed an estimated three-quarters of Tabas' 13,000 residents. Most of the survivors were seriously injured and the most severely hurt were flown to Tehran for treatment.

Officials feared the death toll from the quake, 7.7 on the Richter scale, would go past the 15,000 mark as reports were received from remote villages surrounding Tabas, where thousands were believed buried in the rubble.

The Iranian army sent 700 soldiers, four medical teams and numerous rescue workers to help house about 1,000

survivors in tents along Tabas' dirt airport runway.

Meanwhile, new tremors were felt Monday. They lasted only a few moments, but residents feared a second major quake.

An earthquake registering 6.5 on the Richter scale rocked the same area on Aug. 31, 1968. Tabas suffered some damage and 12,000 people in the area were killed.

Davis fined $1,000, probation ordered

VANCOUVER (CP)—Former transport minister Jack Davis, 62, was fined $1,000 and placed on probation for two months Monday in county court for defrauding the provincial government of $1,074 by misrepresenting his travel expenses.

The sentence came after character witnesses appeared for the former federal Liberal cabinet minister and he announced his resignation as a member of Premier Bennett's Social Credit government.

The premier said from Kelowna that it was "difficult to accept the reality of a colleague's announced resignation under such difficult circumstances. Those of us who are in public life realize how difficult it can be and we accept that."

"However, no one can be unfeeling about the unfortunate circumstances surrounding Mr. Davis' case. As premier, I regret that it has happened and I have the greatest sympathy for both my former colleague and his family."

"Mr. Davis has given long service to this province and this country as a public servant and as a private citizen and I feel that it would be entirely appropriate for me to thank him publicly for that service at this time."

Bennett gave no indication of a by-election date.

Sherman Hood, lawyer for Davis, had asked for a conditional discharge after telling Judge J. J. Anderson that Davis submitted his letter of resignation to Harvey

Hurricane Greta slams Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA (AP)—Hurricane Greta swept past Honduras' north coast late Monday, its torrential rains and 200-kilometre-an-hour winds destroying hundreds of homes as it headed for landfall on the small British colony of Belize.

"We have no reports of deaths or injuries as yet, but many homes have been destroyed," said Herman Allan Padgett, the government's press secretary. Initial reports from military commanders said 481 homes had been blown down or washed away.

"It doesn't look like we're going to have anywhere near the damage caused by Fifi," Padgett said. "This hurricane appears to be of less intensity and we are better prepared."

Hurricane Fifi tore along the same path in 1974, leaving 6,000 dead and 500,000 homeless and Honduras' agricultural economy reeling.

Padgett said about 2,000 persons were evacuated from Puerto Castilla and communications were down in many areas.

Give, take for accord

United Press International

The Israelis got:

- A commitment for a separate peace treaty with Egypt, no matter what else happens. Jerusalem and Cairo will have the same kind of full diplomatic relations that the United States and Canada have.

- A promise of security (in the form of peace with its neighbors) in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Sinai that no amount of troops or territory could provide.

- A U.S. promise to build them two new airfields in the Negev desert to replace the four that are being given up by Israel in the Sinai.

The Israelis gave:

- An implied commitment to withdraw from most of the territory they have occupied since 1967.

- Limitation of their military occupation of the West Bank. Their remaining troops, about half of what they now have, will be restricted to certain enclaves.

- Recognition that the legitimate rights of the Palestinians must be recognized as part of a Middle East solution.

The Egyptians got:

- The prospect of the end of Israeli military occupation and the promise of the return of almost all Egyptian territory lost during the 1967 war, including four airfields built since then by the Israelis.

- The Israelis to stop building further settlements in the Sinai and Gaza Strip, and at least a temporary halt, for the duration of the negotiations, of new settlements in the West Bank.

- American participation as a full and continuing partner in the Middle East.

- The return of sovereignty in the Sinai Peninsula.

The Egyptians gave:

- Israel the full recognition it had sought.

- The concession that its troops and the type of armaments will be limited in certain parts of Egyptian sovereign territory.

- Israel the right to veto members of the Egyptian and Jordanian delegations. An eventual Palestinian delegation will not be subject to Israeli vetoes.

Sinai towns may prove fatal flaw

By FRANK CREPEAU

TEL AVIV (AP)—The great unresolved issue of the Camp David Mideast summit is the future of about 100 Jewish settlements on occupied Arab land.

Israel is faced with a crucial decision on those settlements, a decision which could be the key to ultimate peace in the Middle East.

The settlements issue will apparently have to be overcome before there can be progress on other major and equally complicated issues, such as the political future of the West Bank and Gaza and the emotional issue of control of Jerusalem, with its Jewish, Moslem and Christian holy places.

For Israel, the settlements are a cornerstone of Zionism, clothed in the mystique of Jews putting down new roots in the Promised Land and defending the borders of the Jewish state. For Arabs, each settlement is a constant injury to Arab pride and an intolerable Jewish presence on Arab land.

It was on the settlement issue—specifically Jewish settlements, mostly small outposts of 100 families or fewer, contain about 10,000

Israelis, but the symbolic importance of the outposts is far greater than the number of settlers.

The settlements stretch from the slopes of Mount Hermon in occupied Syria in the north to sun-baked Sharm el-Sheikh on the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula. They dot the sweltering Jordan Valley in the east and spread along the Mediterranean coastline of the Sinai to the west of Israel.

Settlements started going up after Israel captured these lands in the 1967 war, and the settlement movement gained new force when Prime Minister Menachem Begin came to power in 1977, proclaiming the West Bank of the Jordan River "liberated territory."

For Begin, and many Israelis, the West Bank is the land God promised to the Jews. As prime minister, Begin has tried to work toward a peace agreement which would safeguard the existing settlements and the right of Jews to live in the West Bank.

It was on the settlement issue—specifically Jewish settlements, mostly small outposts of 100 families or fewer, contain about 10,000

Bigger law school

Working drawings for a proposed University of Victoria law school building can proceed, the UVic board of governors was informed by the provincial government Monday.

The proposed building would cost about $6 million, and would permit the law school to expand, law dean Murray Fraser said. The law school is currently housed in cramped quarters in the McPherson Library on campus, and is limited to 70 new students a year because of space limitations. In the new building, it could expand to take 100 new students each year.

The working drawings should be completed this winter, administration dean Trevor Matthews said. If the university receives government approval to go to tender immediately, the building could be ready for classes in the fall of 1980.

Tides beat smells

What does a proud community like Oak Bay do when it finds itself with something as out of character as a bad smell?

It wills it away. And that's all there is to it.

That was the case with the foul seaweed of Willows Beach.

A complaint from a resident prompted a suggestion during a council committee meeting that a sniff patrol (someone with a nose for such things) check the situation out. The smelly offender could be trucked from behind the Tweed Curtain to some place more appropriate for offending odors.

Ald. Peter Bunn provided the positive thinking. He had this feeling that if council just left it for 30 days it would get up and go away on its own.

When the committee met again Monday night, his mind-over-matter theory was proven right.

A brief report from municipal engineer Geoffrey White disclosed that "weather and tides have taken care of the situation."

An elated Bunn noted that his confidence had saved Oak Bay $400.

So you were wondering whatever became of the Jack of beanstalk fame? Well, he grew up, and to avoid reprisal from friends of the fallen giant, changed his name to Phil Moran. Then he moved to 860 Lampson where he

Zero: New budget start?

Zero-based budgeting will get a good look from the Saanich school board, the board decided Monday.

The board voted to have its administration develop several alternative proposals for using the system in at least sections of its budget, after listening to two school trustees and the board's secretary-treasurer, who had recently attended a seminar in Vancouver led by Peter Phyr, the best-known advocate of zero-based budgeting.

The system basically requires all expenditures to be justified each year, rather than simply adding or subtracting increments from the budget without asking whether the item or program is necessary.

With zero-based budgeting, all possible expenditures are ranked, in order of their priority, after being examined and justified as necessary. The amount of money available then determines the level of services which is provided, and the point at which programs deemed less important are cut off.

While praising the system for its logic and common sense, trustee Walter Tangye had doubts that it could be applied to a school district.

For one thing, it is extremely difficult to clearly define the costs of many school programs. For another, zero-based budgeting transfers spending control to the final authority, in this case the school board, and "I can't see some of our people falling gracefully into line on that," Tangye said.

Finally, the program requires "fixed, clear objectives."

"We haven't got any," he said bluntly.

"We are really so set in our ways, our system is so firmly established, that I don't see it happening, although I would like it too."

More optimistic about the system was trustee Gerry Kristianson, who said the district should "take a stab at subjecting portions of our budget to that kind of analysis."

While the school district staff might not welcome the extra work involved, some programs such as industrial education are relatively easier to cost, and would lend themselves to zero-based budgeting, Kristianson said.

One advantage of the system is that programs and services are ranked in order of importance before dollar figures are applied to them, an important consideration for school boards which must make up their provisional budgets before they know how much money the B.C. education finance formula will give them, since the basic figures in the formula are not announced until Dec. 1 each year.

The system is also an excellent way to improve haphazard staffing and budgeting procedures, Kristianson said.

School board secretary-treasurer Ross Ingram indicated that he was not averse to the exercise.

"I'm fairly optimistic about it. It gives us flexibility in adding new programs, which we don't have now."

It also places the onus for decision-making more squarely on the shoulders of trustees, who in the past simply directed the administration to cut money from the budget, without always having to decide where the cuts would be made, he said.

$6.9-million terminal expansion

Pat Bay may become international again

By BILL SMITH
Colonist reporter

A $6.9-million expansion of the Pat Bay airport terminal is on the drawing boards.

The proposal calls for a tripling of the present 14,444-square-foot terminal building, Donald McArthur, acting supervisor of the transport ministry's airports branch, said in an interview from Vancouver Monday.

The planned expansion, almost ready to go to the concept design stage, will also mean international traffic will be able to use the airport because customs facilities will be upgraded.

"This will mean Canadian Customs will be asked to lift restrictions in force governing international traffic into the airport."

The restrictions on trans-ocean flights were imposed because of a lack of space in the existing terminal building, he said.

The expansion is based on passenger movement forecasts to 1990. MoT predicts the 300,000 passengers now using the airport annually will at least double in the next 12 years.

McArthur said so far there has been no indication the project will be affected by the recently-announced federal government austerity program.

"A few snags remain to be worked out," he said, "all being well we should be able to make a budget application very soon."

The project could be completed by 1981, providing there were no hitches, he said.

A master plan for the expansion was recently completed by transport officials after discussions with the Capital Region Board, representatives of the province and municipal officials.

The plan determined a need for a major expansion of the terminal building but ruled out any runway expansion.

Studies done in conjunction with the plan plotted passenger routes and the time it took for them to be processed through the various procedures at the airport.

The study revealed a need to upgrade customs facilities as well as other service areas in the building.

McArthur said no decision had yet been made on whether the expansion would be in the form of a new building or if a second storey would be added to the terminal.

"But I would hate to see a practically new building torn down, that would be both foolish and costly."

However, if it was decided to build a new structure, the existing terminal building would be ideal for an air operations centre, he said.

The present terminal, built in 1964, handles about 14 domestic flights a day.

The airport has enjoyed a fairly steady growth pattern. For example in 1964, 100,000 passengers used the facility. Four years later this had jumped to 200,000. In 1972 the number of passenger movements was just under 300,000.

Incident at restaurant keeps police hopping

Saanich police had their hands full late Monday night with an ambulance accident and an apparent drug overdose at the McDonald's restaurant on Saanich Road.

The ambulance, with lights and sirens going, was turning onto Saanich Road from Douglas Street en route to the McDonald's about 11 p.m. when it collided with a car travelling in the same direction. The driver of the car received head wounds in the accident and was treated by the ambulance attendants.

The ambulance was damaged on the right front fender, while the car's left rear fender was caved in.

Meanwhile, another ambulance was called out to the restaurant.

An eyewitness said a youth was pulled from the back of a truck parked at McDonald's and placed in the ambulance, the apparent victim of a drug overdose. The truck was later towed away.

The eyewitness also said a girl in the truck was taken away by police. No details were being released by police at press time.

'Some can't read a financial statement'

Ed Lum hints comeback

A watchful Ed Lum is poised for a political comeback.

The former Saanich Mayor gave a strong hint of his intention to seek an aldermanic seat in this year's municipal election in an interview Monday.

Lum, an interested spectator at last Thursday's public hearing on the Interurban industrial zone proposal, said he is eyeing a return to the political arena but may not make a definite decision until the ninth hour—"the 11th hour would be leaving it too late."

Lum, deposed by Couveller in a three-way mayoral race last November, believes the Royal Oak industrial park proposal rejected by council earlier this year will be a major campaign issue in the upcoming election, depending on who the candidates are.

"Whether or not it's an issue in the campaign, I'm willing to bet my bottom dollar the Royal Oak proposal will be a reality within two years."

He said he does not agree with those Saanich aldermen who feel a referendum on industrial development should be held in November.

"Elected people are there to make decisions they feel are in the best interests of the whole municipality, regardless how unpopular they might be."

Lum said he shared the opinion of many residents that the present council is being dictated to by ratepayer groups.

There should also be more businessmen on council, he said, adding: "We need people who have been in business because some of the people there can't even read a financial statement."

He said since taking office, Couveller had done nothing to move the municipality ahead, and had displayed no leadership.

Morale among municipal staff was at rock bottom, he said, blaming this on a failure by council to provide leadership and direction.

The problems facing council were a direct result of a lack of leadership and business experience, the former mayor said.

He chastized council for considering industrial development at Interurban because of the high costs of services and road upgrading.

"A previous council looked at the property and ruled it out because of these factors and because the land was outside the urban containment boundary," he said.

Land issue alive—mayor

Saanich Mayor Mel Couveller said Monday he expects someone will reintroduce the Royal Oak industrial zone proposal this year or early in 1979.

The proposal to rezone 128 acres at Glanford and Vanalman was defeated by council in March when Couveller broke a 4-4 council deadlock and voted against the rezoning.

"I am satisfied the issue is going to come before council again," he said Monday.

In preparation for this move, Couveller said he is toying with the idea of having an impact assessment study done by staff, similar to the one prepared for the Interurban scheme, a project overwhelmingly defeated by council last week.

Couveller, however, is confident the Royal Oak proposal will again be defeated the second time around.

Defeat of both the industrial schemes would mean there would be no major industrial development in the municipality, thereby eliminating efforts to broaden the tax base, he said, warning this would mean revenue would not be available to extend services.

Expressing disappointment at the 8-1 defeat of the Interurban proposal, Couveller said he had received many calls since the hearing from residents who were astounded and appalled council had rejected a municipal land banking scheme that was going to generate tax dollars.

Will Curtis offer gift at municipalities meeting?

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is scheduled to speak to the Union of B.C. Municipalities' annual convention in Penticton next week, and Victoria Ald. Robert Wright wants the minister to bring a present.

Wright says Curtis could do a lot for Victoria and other urban municipalities by extending the deadline for abolishing the land-use contract for at least another year. (See also Page 13).

And the UBCM convention, Wright says, would be an excellent platform from which to announce the extension.

The land-use contracts, a zoning tool by which municipalities and regional boards can negotiate special concessions with developers, is to be legislated out of existence Nov. 19.

The basic advantage of a land-use contract is that municipalities could grant a developer certain concessions not allowed under existing zoning without rezoning the property involved.

When a number of municipalities and regional boards abused the system by setting high impost fees and by declaring virtually everything within their boundaries development areas, making every development subject to land-use contracts, Curtis lowered the boom, abolishing land-use contracts.

A new zoning tool, the special development permit, is to take its place. For about a year, both the land-use contract and the development permit have existed side by side, but on Nov. 19, the land-use contract is to be discontinued.

Wright said the development permit system had a number of basic flaws. It regulated location and aesthetics of a development, but not density and land-use.

"And in certain sensitive areas of the city, we should be able to negotiate with developers for certain concessions, and the only way to do it has been by land-use contract, which compelled the developer by law to carry out his promises," he said.

The abolition of the land-use contract, Wright said, would also be detrimental to the city's heritage program for residential homes.

The heritage bylaw permits a higher zoning use of residential heritage homes as an incentive for preservation. The owner of a heritage home may, for instance, get permission to use it for commercial purposes, such as a bookstore or an antique store, in return for the restrictions inherent in heritage designation.

That has been handled by way of land-use contract to keep the residential zoning intact.

And why doesn't city council want to rezone a heritage home to permit selective commercial uses?

"What if the home burns down? With the property zoned commercial, the owner could build just about anything on that property," Wright said.

"Regular zoning categories are too inflexible. They are black and white and don't allow for special considerations," he said.

Wright believes the minister could accomplish both, retention of the land-use contract and an end to abuses.

"We need a simplified version of the land-use contract, something that regulates density and land use alone. It could be designed to apply to a specific properties or projects," Wright said.

"Together with the development permit system, such a simplified version of the land-use contract could be an effective tool for municipalities," he added.

Wright said he hoped the minister would announce something to that effect in Penticton Wednesday.
